Important Anniversary.
Vanity and War.
Government Opportunity.
Two Bad Examples.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

ON SUNDAY, Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, celebrated the 30th anniversary of the first Wright flight, in a heavier than air plane.

In future ages that anniversary will be celebrated as the most important material victory of the human race since the beginning of time.

The flight of the Wright brothers freed human beings from the law of gravitation that had held them glued to the earth. In time it will enable school children to fly around the world, taking lessons in geography and history, as they fly, making any part of this and other countries within one day's journey of any other part.

And eventually the airplane will put an end to war by making it too dangerous.

Many millions probably will be bombed and gassed before that happens. This country should arrange to avoid more than a fair share of the bombing and gassing.

VANITY AND war are old. In the Ozark foothills, scientists, digging up an ancient fortress of the Osage Indians, have found the Indian equivalent to what used to be the great Krupp gun factory.

Hundreds of stone axes, war clubs, tomahawks, arrow heads, were found together, and a contraption used by the Indian maiden to paint her cheeks and lips with a red paste.

She painted her face, the Indians fought about her, forgot what started the fight, then went on fighting indefinitely. The white man is just about as intelligent, also the white lady, with her paint.

IN A southern city with about 100,000 white people, 30,000 Negroes are housed on the edge of the city, in filthy, disease-breeding, vile shacks.

Crowded together, sometimes ten on a single lot, with no bathrooms, no privacy, no opportunity for better living, conditions are a disgrace, not to them, but to the whites that make them pay $156 a year rent for a two-room shack not worth $156.

THE GOVERNMENT will include in its housing expenditure funds to supply decent living quarters for the thirty thousand colored workers and their families, now living under conditions that would be interfered with by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, if dogs instead of human beings lived in such quarters.

This offers an opportunity for the government to promote building, invest some money and get it back. The colored people pay their rent.

A JURY in Louisiana decided that Mrs. Allie Mae Purvis, 38 years old, bribed a Negro boy to push her husband into the water and drown him. The police say the woman confessed. Louisiana will hang her.

She, for reasons not known, decided that her husband deserved death, and killed him.

Louisiana decides that she deserves death, and kills her.

What is the exact difference? Who sets the worse of the two bad examples?

THE TINY state of Monaco, where the big gambling house attracts the big American geese, sues the state of Mississippi for $100,000 worth of Mississippi bonds that ceased to be valuable after the Civil War.

Our Supreme Court will be asked to make Mississippi pay Monaco, a little country that Napoleon permitted to remain independent because the Monacans decided with him.

The Supreme Court might say:

"Sell your pretty bonds to the countries that owe this nation fifteen or twenty billion dollars, and let them deduct from what they owe."

TURKEY AND plum pudding on Christmas and New Year's Day, and Congress will be back, telling what it thinks of the Roosevelt policies thus far and what, if anything, it plans to interfere with them.

Senator Hiram Johnson, although a Republican, says:

"The country must go along with Roosevelt or go to hell economically."

The country will prefer to go along with Roosevelt.

IN A Detroit beer garden police arrested Miss St. Pierre, reporting that they found her on the stage "wearing two fans and a pair of shoes."

Eve, before she ate the apple, would have asked, "Why wear so much?" And after she ate the apple, would have thought the two fans, properly placed, plenty of clothing. We are particular now.

Eight women and four men on a Detroit jury brought in a verdict that may send Miss St. Pierre to prison for one year, with a $500 fine.

If the young lady goes to jail those who hired and exhibited her should also go to jail.

MRS. JANE WITHERS, of Glencoe, Okla., who has just died at the age of 92, gave this advice to girls:

"Don't bother about money, get a good, hard-working man."

A. G. Withers, 97, who married Mrs. Withers 76 years ago, and survives her, says:

That kind of girl is not as numerous as she was seventy-six years ago.

Death Gun Brings Tears

MISS COLLEEN NANNS, 23 . . . ON TRIAL TODAY FOR SLAYING

Miss Nanns, who wept in court today as she saw the police service pistol with which Patrolman Roger J. Casilio, 38, was slain in East End apartment they shared. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

SUSPECT WEEPS AT DEATH TRIAL

BULLETIN.

Shaken by sobs, Colleen Nanns testified today at her trial for the killing of Patrolman Roger J. Casilio that he was beating her at the time the fatal shot was fired in her apartment.

The gun that killed Patrolman Roger J. Casilio, 38, brought tears to the eyes of Colleen Nanns, his 23-year-old sweetheart, today as the state strove to convict her of the slaying.

The policeman's service pistol was identified as the fatal weapon by William P. McCready, police ballistic expert. For the first time in the trial, the attractive former waitress wept.

Her eyes were dry, however, when Casilio's wife, Mrs. Mary Casilio, of 142 Bertha street, accused the girl of breaking up her home. Asked why she and Casilio had not lived together for two and a half years, the wife answered dispassionately:

"It was on her account. There wouldn't have been any fuss if it hadn't been for her."

COURTROOM MEETING

The courtroom meeting of the wife and her rival was not the first, Mrs. Casilio said. By chance, she said, she met Casilio and the girl in a jewelry store about a

Senate to Favor New Year Rum Sale

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—A Senate committee reported for passage last night the Witkin (House) resolution which provides that liquor may be sold from midnight until 2 a. m., on New Year's Day.

Under the existing liquor laws the sale of liquor is banned on New Year's Day, a legal holiday.

Murder Jury Trying Mother Discharged

ASHLAND, Kan., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Unable to reach a verdict, the jury trying Mrs. Edna Andrews for the alleged poison-murder of her son, Ben, was discharged today.

Contest Winners Announced Today

Twelve of the thousands of entrants guessed the makeup of the entire team and therefore 12 instead of 10 blankets will be awarded, the committee feeling it would be unfair to eliminate in such a close race.

Turn to page 25 for list of winners and other details.

OFFICER FREED IN MACE DEATH

Patrolman Hiram McAbee was freed by a directed verdict in Criminal Court today of the charge that a blow from his mace last April killed Lawrence O'Malley, 21, of 16 McLain street.

Visiting Judge Thomas F. Bailey directed the verdict after Dr. J. W. McMeans, Coroner's physician, testified that the blow which caused O'Malley's death could not have been administered by a policeman's mace.

Dr. McMeans testified an autopsy showed the youth died from a fracture at the base of the skull and in his opinion it came from the youth's falling on his head rather than from a blow.

McAbee arrested O'Malley when he saw him pulling shrubbery from the lawn of Dr. J. S. Stewart, 611 East Warrington avenue. Gerald O'Brien, 23, a passerby, testified that he saw the policeman hitting O'Malley on the head with his mace.

Duce Hears Hitler Views From Envoy

However, the official disclosure of the result of his Berlin visit was withheld pending a further and more detailed report to be given perhaps tonight.

Bandits Get $1,400 At Beer Garden

CHARLEROI, Pa., Dec. 19.—(INS.)—State police today sought two gunmen who held up a beer garden here and escaped with $1,400 in cash, after having threatened Mrs. Samuel Polansky, 60, wife of the proprietor, with torture and death if she did not reveal the hiding place of the money.

Broad Powers Granted Labor Board in Disputes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—In the light of the controversy between the National Labor Board and the Weirton Steel Company, and contemplating legal battles to come, President Roosevelt today, by order, defined the authority of that board to strengthen its hand. The brief document said:

"All action heretofore taken by this board . . . is hereby approved and ratified."

The presidential order authorizes the board "to compose all conflicts threatening the industrial peace of the country."

The order defines the powers of the board, giving it authority to settle "by mediation, conciliation or arbitration" all controversies between employers and employes.

TEXT OF ORDER

"By virtue of the authority vested in me under title one of the National Industrial Recovery Act approved June 16, 1933, and in order to effectuate purposes of said act it is hereby ordered as follows:

"(1)—The National Labor Board created on August 5, 1933, to 'pass promptly on any case of hardship or dispute that may arise from interpretation or application of the President's re-employment agreement,' shall continue to adjust all industrial disputes whether arising out of the interpretation and operation of the President's re-employment agreement or any duly approved industrial code of fair competition, and to compose all conflicts threatening the industrial peace of the country.

"All action heretofore taken by this board in the discharge of its functions is hereby approved and ratified.

POWERS CITED

"(2)—The powers and functions of said board shall be as follows:

"(A)—To settle by mediation, conciliation or arbitration all controversies between employers and employes which tend to impede the purposes of the National Industrial Recovery Act, provided, however, the board may decline to take cognizance of controversies between employers and employes in any field of trade or industry where a means of settlement provided for by agreement, industrial code, or federal law, has not been invoked.

"(B)—To establish local or regional boards upon which employers and employes shall be equally represented, and to delegate thereto such powers and territorial jurisdiction as the National Labor Board may determine.

"(C)—To review the determination of the local or regional board where the public interest so requires.

"(D)—To make rules and regulations governing its procedure and the discharge of its functions."

McKees Rocks Store Swept by Flames

Fire of undetermined origin today caused damage estimated at $2,000 to the Maytag store, 415 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks. The interior and contents of the one-story frame building were destroyed.

Mrs. Smith Asks $5,000 Slash In McNair Pay

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, Mayor-elect William N. McNair's representative at the budget sessions, astounded City Council today when she suggested that the new Mayor's salary be reduced from $15,000 to $10,000.

Councilman W. Y. English, who is considering court action to have his $1,333 cut in 1933 restored, half rose from his chair and stared at Mrs. Smith when she made the pronouncement.

Mrs. Smith's suggestion regarding the Mayor's salary was included in her recommendations that the budget of $47,995 for the Mayor's office be reduced by $8,000. Another item was the reduction of the salary of the Mayor's secretary from $4,100 to $3,600.

M'NAIR'S IDEA

In commenting on this recommendation, Mrs. Smith said:

"Mr. McNair desires very earnestly that the budget for 1934 shall balance with the millage fixed by you gentlemen."

She also suggested that the services of three city magistrates be dispensed with and that the duties of the magistrate in Central Police Court be combined with those of the magistrate in Morals Court. Her recommendations represented a reduction of $7,350 in the $29,600 police magistrates' budget.

Council was beseiged with requests today to cut the budget and keep appropriations within the city's anticipated income, and at the same time was urged to increase expenditures.

Mrs. Smith led those advocating slashes to keep within income.

CHILD LABOR FOES WIN AGAIN

House Measure Forced To Senate Floor Despite G. O. P.

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—By a single vote the Senate judiciary general committee this afternoon reported favorably the Craig (House) bill for ratification of the federal child labor amendment.

The committee vote was 11 to 10. With Senators Morris Einstein and William D. Mansfield voting in the affirmative, the bill was brought to the floor despite the vigorous opposition of the Republican organization.

The result was amazing even to the most optimistic backers of the measure, who had expected their only chance lay with the House, which has for consideration late tonight a similar measure, by Senator Samuel Salus, of Philadelphia.

The Salus bill passed the Senate last night after the Republican organization failed by only one vote in an effort to kill it. The closeness of that vote had indicated the Judiciary General Committee would stifle the Craig bill.

OPPOSITION PLANS

In the Senate tomorrow the Republican organization is preparing to try to recommit the Craig bill for the purpose of burying it. One senator who voted last night against recommitting the Salus bill is understood to be ready to change his vote and lend

Youngstown Girl Marries Turkish Dancing Teacher

DORIS ROSE

Undesired Voyage To Europe Ends In Romance

YOUNGSTOWN, Dec. 19.—The lure of a Mediterranean moon has captivated Doris Rose, 21, popular and pretty Youngstown high school girl, who only two summers ago fought tooth and nail to keep from accompanying her family to Turkey.

A short news dispatch from Istanbul, and the simultaneous receipt by a girl friend here of a letter from the former Youngstown high school girl, disclosed that she has been married to Sed Edip Bey, Turkish dancing instructor, with whom she has appeared in Istanbul and Smyrna cabarets.

When her father, Harry Rose, a Youngstown construction engineer, signed a three-year contract with the Turkish government in 1931, his daughter refused to go. In Philadelphia she slipped away from the family and drove back to Youngstown. It was a year later that she was induced to join them in Turkey.

In her letter Miss Rose didn't tell her former chum that she was to be married. But, her friend admitted today, she should have guessed it from reading . . .

" . . . He speaks perfect English and I thought he was an American before he told me he was Turkish. . ."

Then, after describing the "age" that has passed since she left America, she added some more:

"It's like this. I started a dancing school here. Then I decided I'd like to take tap dancing. I took my lessons from a man here—Sed Edip Bey. He was educated in England and Armenia.

"We're going to dance in Europe — Berlin — Holland—Cannes—Nice — Monte Carlo—Boy! Do I want to? And when his year and 11-month contract over here is up, then for the States . . . I'm so thrilled!"

Miss Rose has a younger brother in school in Turkey.

SALES HERE BY JAN. 2 DOUBTFUL

Bidders Ask From 7 To 18 Days For Remodeling

It is almost a certainty that Allegheny County will be without a completed state liquor store by January 2, the date set for the state to take over the sale of package liquor. This fact was established today when the bids were received for remodeling the county's first store at 924 Fourth avenue, Coraopolis.

The shortest time estimated by a bidder for completing the alterations was seven working days. The others varied up to 18 days. As the three lowest bids must now be certified to the Liquor Control Board in Harriburg before work can be authorized here, it would be impossible to have the store finished by January 2, on the basis of the contractors' figures.

SITE LEASED

At the same time it was announced that Pittsburgh's first downtown liquor store will be 342 Boulevard of the Allies. This store room formerly was occupied by the National Type Foundries, Inc., and was leased from the Commonwealth Real Estate Company, according to R. A. MacGregor and George G. Weissert, representatives here for the liquor board.

Lowest bidders on the Coraopolis store were Harry Dunn,

DRIVERS END STORE STRIKE

Both sides have announced a settlement of the truck drivers' strike at Kaufmann's store.

Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann's, said:

"Normal delivery service will be resumed Wednesday morning by a regular delivery force. We are pleased to make this announcement after having been advised by the committee of our drivers and helpers that they have decided to return to work.

"They have accepted our offer of December 14 in which we stand ready to meet with any committee properly representing the drivers and helpers; that any negotiations between the Kaufmann company and the committee will be subject to the retail code for fair competition as signed by the President of the United States."

Walter Henderson, president of Local Drivers' Union 249, announced that a settlement had been effected "in compliance with a request from the National Labor Board."

Kaufmann's today issued this statement:

"If any customers were subjected to hardships and inconveniences, we wish to thank them for the steadfast co-operation during the trying period.

"Our heartiest thanks go to the entire staff of the Post-office Department for the marvelous delivery service they have rendered.

Ailing Governor Sets Yule Holiday

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—All employes in departments under Gov. Pinchot's jurisdiction are to have a three and one-half day Christmas vacation.

The notice was sent yesterday by the Governor from his sickbed in New York. The various offices will be closed from Friday, December 22, until noon Tuesday, December 26.

Warden Makes Plea For More Prisoners

Warden John McNeil is appealing to police magistrates to send more customers.

They are needed to man Parkview, the jail farm at Blawnox, he said. The total prisoners received last year to this date was 24,059. The wagons have delivered only 20,940 prisoners this year.

CO-ED PERILED, FARMER SLAIN

International News Service.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 19.—A farmer returning home from a church meeting who was mistaken for a "petting party" bandit was shot to death today by the nephew of a Congressman as the youth sought to prevent what he considered an attempt to drag his pretty co-ed companion from their parked automobile.

Both occupants of the automobile, Britton Young, nephew of Congresman-at-Large Stephen Young, and Miss Ruth Beiter, 21, of Canton, O., were students at Western Reserve University here.

Victim of the shooting, which occurred in a lonely section of suburban Pepper Pike village, was Carl Metling, 48, a Cuyahoga County farmer. His wife told police that he had attended a

Subway Bond Issue Repealer Approved

Council today, sitting as the finance committee, approved a repealer of the six million dollar subway bond issue authorized by a vote of the people in 1919. The purpose is to conserve the popular borrowing power. Of the sum provided, $200,000 was spent in surveys, leaving $5,880,000 to be nullified.

Homestead Vandals Loot Fifth School

Breaking into the Fifth Ward Public School, at West and Eleventh streets, Homestead, vandals looted rooms of pens and pencils last night, and endangered the building by burning rulers in a class room.

Four other schools in Homestead were entered in the same way last week. Police are searching for a band of youths.

LINDYS ARRIVE IN NEW YORK

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, finishing a dramatic 25,000-mile journey over much of the globe, came home today to hang the baby's stocking up for Christmas. They alighted at Glenn Curtiss Airport, North Beach, Queens, at 2:38 p. m., Pittsburgh time.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh took off northward in their plane at 8:41 a. m. (Pittsburgh time) today after spending last night with Rear Admiral James J. Raby, of the Charleston Navy Yard.

The couple apparently intended to land at Newark or Long Island airports, as indicated last night, but gave out no formal word on their plans.

Today's flight was expected to bring to a close a 25,000 aerial survey journey which took them across two portions of the Atlantic Ocean and carried them almost around the Western Hemisphere.

Less than five hours were expected to see them at the end of their five months' trip, and only a brief rest was probable before they plunged into preparations for "Christmas with the baby"—the goal announced by Mrs. Lindbergh even before the couple headed west across the Azores and the South Atlantic less than two weeks ago.

Ether Experiment Kills Honor Student

OAKLAND, Cal., Dec. 19.—(Universal.)—His intensive studies in chemistry yesterday brought death to Edward Robert Hardwick, 14, high school honor student and Eagle Boy Scout. The lad was discovered dead in bed at his home here, victim of an experiment.

The boy had fashioned an "ether cone" from his mother's rubber bathing cap. The mother scouted the idea of suicide and said Edward's death was undoubtedly due to an experiment of some kind.

Ford Loud in Praise Of Hearst Newspapers

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Henry Ford, motor magnate, yesterday revealed a deep admiration for the Hearst newspapers.

In an exclusive interview with a reporter for the New York Evening Journal, the gray-haired manufacturer said:

"We ought to be pace-setters in everything we do.

"You know, you work for a great organization.

"The Hearst papers are splendid. I read them all over the country. They are a great power for good. They spread out everywhere.

"I believe the reason why the Hearst papers are so exciting and interesting is because you boys working for Mr. Hearst fight so hard for your news. You get it, too.

"Keep on fighting for your news. Anything worth doing is worth doing well. Get all the joy you can out of trying to do things well. That applies to newspaper work and everything else.

"Try to be an up and comer. Let life's challenge stimulate you."

RAILROAD 'CZAR' CHARGES LAW VIOLATION

Margiotti Retained to Force Hearing at Washington

Taking issue with Federal Coordinator Joseph B. Eastman's announced intent to force railroads to cease contributing to the support of company unions or requiring that employes join them 35,000 shopcraft employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad, today petitioned Eastman for a hearing with a view of retaining their present representation plan. Chairmen of the regional general committees, who took action on the petition yesterday, are concluding their conferences here today, meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Under date of December 7, it was brought out at the meeting yesterday, Eastman in a circular letter to all the railroads issued from Washington, arbitrarily set the end of this month for the carriers to employ a "hands off" policy so far as representation plans, or company unions, are concerned.

CITES FIVE POINTS

He calls attention of the regional co-ordinating committees to five points specifically made unlawful, he said, by the Emergency Transportation Act. It will be illegal he contends for railroads to:

1—Deny, or in any way question the right of its employes to join the labor organization of their choice.

2—Interfere in any way with the organizations of its employes.

3—Use its funds in maintaining so-called company unions.

4—Influence or coerce its employes in an effort to induce them to join or remain members of such company unions.

5—Require any person seeking employment to sign a contract or agreement promising to join or not to join a labor organization. And if such a contract has been enforced, the railroad is required to notify its employes by an appropriate order that said contract has been discarded and is no longer binding on them in any way.

EASTMAN'S VIEWS

In his communication, Eastman states that:

"Carrier officers have participated in or supervised, directly or indirectly, the formation of, and carrier managements have retained a measure of control over constitutions, by-laws and other governing rules of organizations of their employes.

"Carriers contribute or have contributed financial support, both directly and indirectly, to company unions.

"Carriers pay, or have paid, directly or indirectly, salaries, wages or expenses of officers, agents, representatives and members of committees of company unions when exclusively engaged in the business of such company unions."

The co-ordinator makes it plain that under the law, he says he can apply to a federal district attorney to institute proceedings for the enforcement of the foregoing provisions; also he states:

"I can also, as I read the statute, cover all or certain of the practices in question by a prohibitory order, infractions of which will be subject to the penalties."

MARGIOTTI RETAINED

Yesterday's conference resulted in the retaining of Attorney Charles J. Margiotti as counsel for the group. A general meeting of representatives of the allied groups of the East and West was called for Chicago December 27 and 28 when a concerted move will be made to force a public hearing in Washington. It is the contention of spokesmen for employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad that their representation plan which has been in force since 1923 has been highly successful and it is their desire to continue this form of collective bargaining.

T. H. Davis, of Philadelphia, general chairman of the Eastern shopcrafts group, said:

"We are satisfied with the representation plan. We have a contract with our employes that is satisfactory and we do not feel that we should be made to discontinue it."

Davis contended that the representation plan included more than 70 per cent of all shopcraft employes of all operating railroads in the East.

FORD BANK AID TOLD SENATORS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Edsel B. Ford and the Ford Motor Company lent the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., 12 million dollars from 1930 to 1932 in an effort to save its chain of banks, Robert O. Lord, its former president, testified today at the Senate banking inquiry.

The group collapsed finally, tying up 700 million dollars of depositors' funds. Lord said Ford lent one million dollars in cash and five million dollars in personal securities late in 1930 to the Guardian Detroit Company. He said Ford "loaned his credit to the group on a loan of two and a half million dollars" in December, 1931. He added:

"The Ford Motor Company, in December, 1932, loaned the group three and a half million dollars, with which the group lifted out of the Union Guardian Trust Company three and a half million dollars of criticized assets."

The Ford aid was a part of 27 million dollars put up by stockholders in an effort to save the banking group, said Lord.

COUNTY FIGHTS SCHOOL BILL

Chairman C. C. McGovern, of the County Commissioners, was ruffled today by news that the Board of Public Education expected the county to pay $1,800 for use of school buildings by personal property assessors.

George E. Meyers, head of the county Board for Assessment and Revision of Taxes, informed the Commissioners that the School Board had granted permission for use of the school buildings between 4 and 10 p. m. but that the county was asked to pay $3.60 a day.

McGovern declared:

"Well, we wont' pay it. I've got a bill for $150,000 from the school board for use of buildings at elections and I'll never pay that, either."

McGovern instructed Meyers to attend a meeting of the school board late today, tell the board the schools belonged to the people and that it should consider free use of school buildings for public purposes a patriotic duty.

POLICE PLEA BACKED

John P. McCullough headed a group of policemen asking for a restoration of the 16⅔ per cent pay cut, and also for a resumption of policemen's pass days and vacation periods. Rabbi Herman Hailperin and Attorney Harry Savage were among those also supporting the policemen's plea.

Council took no action on the policemen's request, but did continue the present appropriation of $33,810 to North Side playgrounds.

Before today's recommendations the Councilmen had recommendations from Mrs. Smith which suggest total cuts of $246,980 in the Bureaus of Light and City Property.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The Mansfield bill for permanent registration in third class cities was passed finally by the Senate last night and was sent to the House. The vote was 47 to 0.

CODE EXTENDED FOR AUTOS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt yesterday extended the effective date of the automobile manufacturers' code through September 4, 1934, upon the report of Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, that employment had increased 20 per cent and payrolls gained 16 per cent since the agreement has been in force.

The extension was requested by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The request was forwarded by Johnson to the White House with a report that since September 5, when the code went into effect, millions of dollars have been added in wages and thousands of idle workers returned to their jobs.

Johnson's report to the President said the actual increase in payrolls was from $12,700,000 in July, to approximately $14,700,000 in September for the members of the chamber, representing 78 per cent of the production capacity and approximately 95 per cent of the units of the industry.

Employment, he said, increased from 125,600 in July to 150,700 in September, a gain of 25,100 workers.

Frick Negotiations Called Off By Union

Frustrated in their attempts to obtain union recognition in a majority of captive mines of this district by a standpat policy of the major subsidiaries, local officials of the United Mine Workers of America were continuing negotiations with the Wheeling Steel Company and with the Republic Steel Corporation.

Negotiations with the H. C. Frick Coke Company and National Mining Company, both subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation, are definitely off. Both sides have referred the matter to the National Labor Board.

Final word is yet to come from Vesta Coal Company and Shannopin Coal Company, both subsidiaries of the Jones and Laughlin Steel interests. Last week the miners' representatives met with officials of the Inland Collieries, subsidiary of the Inland Steel Company, and yesterday conferred with W. H. Garris, superintendent of the Wheeling Steel Company's mine at Harmarville. Today they are to confer with Republic Steel Corporation officials.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, returned yesterday from Indianapolis, where he had been conferring with other international board members. The troubles of the soft coal region were discussed, Murray said, but no action was taken pending a ruling from the National Labor Board at Washington.

New Frick Strike Looms, Walkout Delayed

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Another walkout of Fayette County miners has been "narrowly averted," officials of the United Mine Workers of America announce.

William Hines, president of District No. 4, of the U. M. W. A., reported after a stormy meeting last night that a strong protest had been made against dismissal of Martin Ryan as checkweighman at Colonial No. 3 mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

Ryan, termed an "insurgent" union leader, was a leading figure in last summer's turbulent strike. Members of the Independent Brotherhood, an organization characterized by U. M. W. A. chiefs as a "company union," recently dispensed with the services of the checkweighman.

Hines said 200 delegates decided to withhold strike action pending efforts to mediate the checkweighman dispute.

IRENE CASTLE BACK AT WORK

For intervals she will step out of the role of the fashionable Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin of exclusive Lake Forest, Ill., and be once again Irene Castle, the name under which she danced and dressed to fame in the World War days.

Once again audiences — but they'll be mostly women this time—will see the slim erect dancer who promoted the bobbed hair fad.

Announcement was made today that she will be a style consultant for a nationally-known girdle and brassiere manufacturing concern.

The famous "Castle bob" is getting slightly gray now—and she is letting nature have its way.

RALPH W. GIBBS NAMED CHIEF OF CWA HERE

Sewickley War Vet Succeeds Bucher, Ousted From Job

Ralph W. Gibbs, 45, World War veteran, of Sewickley, today was named successor to H. F. Bucher as director of the Federal-State Employment Office here, in charge of CWA jobs.

Bucher was ousted last week by Gov. Pinchot, and A. W. Motley, head of the State Employment Bureau, has had supervision of the office here pending the appointment of a successor.

Gibbs was educated in public schools of Norwalk, O.; Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.; Princeton University, and Cleveland Law School. He served in the army from 1916 to 1919, being a major of cavalry and field artillery overseas.

APPOINTMENT LAUDED

After the war he was for 10 years assistant general sales manager for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. Since 1929 he has been engaged in real estate promotional work for himself.

After announcement of Gibbs' appointment had been made, William E. Quinby, chairman of the Advisory Council for Federal and State employment activities, said:

"I am sure Mr. Gibbs will be satisfactory to all of us."

Previously Quinby had expressed fears that a political appointment would be made. He had asserted:

"We will not stand for Judge Ralph H. Smith or anyone else injecting politics into the employment service here."

NEGRO TO GET JOB

Prejudice complaints by Negro organizations in Pittsburgh against the Civil Works employment office will be stilled by the appointment of a Negro to the bureau's interviewing staff, according to Motley.

Motley said the bureau will also consult a committee of prominent Negroes so that all difficulties may be "ironed out."

I. A. Karam, war veteran representative from Washington, is in Pittsburgh this week to see that veterans get sufficient consideration on CWA jobs. Ex-service men with dependents, he said, get first preference.

JOBS FOR 19,000 SEEN

When all county projects now in Harrisburg are sanctioned, the number of CWA positions will be increased to more than 19,000. James L. Stuart, administrator, hopes to add 8,000 more by securing funds allotted to other sections of the state, but returned because of lack of plans for spending the money. Projects are still being accepted at the local office.

Plan approvals received at Stuart's office yesterday included these six for Pittsburgh: survey of the city's passenger transportation system, 38 men to get work; improvement of the Cowley Public School, 10; lot grading at Daniel Webster School, 12; improvements on Franklin, Fulton and Brushton public schools, 21; construction of two storm sewers, 66.

Waiters Threaten Strike Over Code

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Restaurant and hotel workers' unions, with an enrollment of about 30,000 members, voted today to strike if President Roosevelt signs the restaurant code now before him for approval.

The main objection was voiced against the minimum wage of 28 cents an hour provided in the code for all workers except waiters.

cause they fear that the dollar will be inflated and their loans repaid in cheaper dollars.

That is a queer fear. Dollars that they are refusing to lend would also be cheaper. Keeping them locked up could not prevent their being inflated, even if they were buried one hundred miles deep in solid rock.

When one dollar is inflated, all dollars are inflated. They might as well be lent and earn interest.

year ago. They were arguing, she said, and both were arrested. She told of another meeting, but she was not pressed for details.

Testimony that the defendant had threatened several times to kill Casilio was given by Harry Jaffe, friend of the slain policeman. He said he knew them both. Once, he said, the girl told him:

"I'll kill that ——— some day."

TELL OF QUARRELS

They quarreled when Casilio remonstrated against the girl's drinking and when she accused him of having affairs with other women, Jaffe said.

Thirteen-year-old Louise Roman, schoolgirl daughter of Mrs. Marie Roman, landlady of the defendant's East End apartment where the shooting occurred, answered questions clearly when she took the stand to testify that she heard the fatal shot and saw the defendant run from the apartment. Later, she said, Casilio crawled down stairs. Before the shooting, she said, she heard the pair quarreling.

Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty said in his opening address that he was not asking for a first degree verdict. He said that the defendant after a minor quarrel took a revolver from a dresser drawer fatally shooting Casilio.

Detectives and two scout car police, who were among the first witnesses called yesterday, testified that Miss Nanns made no effort to escape and claimed self-defense when arrested.

CO-ED PERILED, FARMER SLAIN

Bible meeting last night and was apparently en route home when he met death.

ACTION UPHELD

Technical charges of manslaughter were filed this afternoon against Young.

Released under $1,000 bond after waiving preliminary hearing, Young was greeted dramatically by Dr. J. B. Beiter, prominent Canton physician and father of the girl. The doctor said:

"My boy, I want to congratulate you. You certainly showed great courage. Ruth and I will stand by you as long as you need us."

Donald Young, father of the youth and for four years prosecutor of Huron County, O., joined in statements issued by Congressman Young, Dr. Beiter and Mayor A. W. Simonson, of Pepper Pike, who said that the farmer had attempted to attack the girl.

DESCRIBES SHOOTING

In a statement to Mayor Simonson, Young said:

"He (Metling) came up to our car and turned a flashlight he was carrying on Miss Beiter and myself. Then he opened the door and demanded to know why we were parked without lights."

"Before we had a chance to say anything further, he grabbed Miss Beiter and started to drag her from the seat. While she was scratching at his face and trying to keep from being pulled out the car, I grabbed the automatic in the pocket of the car. "I told him to stop or I would shoot. He didn't, so I shot."

Ford City Burgess Hails Mrs. Pinchot

FORD CITY, Pa., Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot will address union workers at the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, the Codogan mines and other industries in this district, it was announced today. There will be no official ban on the talk, Burgess M. C. Davis declared:

"Mrs. Pinchot will be most cordially welcomed to our community."

INSULL SEEKS NEW REFUGE IN ENGLAND

Hopes for British Stay After Permit in Greece Expires

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Samuel Insull, dethroned American utilities czar, plans to go to England when his residence permit in this country expires January 31, it was reported here today.

The 74-year-old fugitive has been remaining in bed most of the time since he was informed he would have to leave Greece.

Originally, he was told his departure would be expected when his permit would regularly have expired, December 31. On his formal application, an extension was granted to January 31.

At the time he was granted an extension, Insull was told his passport would be visaed to any country he chose to visit upon leaving Greece. His passport, however, has been revoked by the United States and it was pointed out he would have to travel on temporary papers.

Nevertheless, Insull was understood today to be negotiating in regard to his passport.

ENGLISH ESTATE READY

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Samuel Insull will be treated as any other American citizen if he applies for a British visa, providing his passport is reinstated, it was learned authoritatively here today.

The fact that he was born in London and once was a British subject would have no bearing upon the disposition of the case, it was stated.

Insull's estate, known as Pincent's Farm, near the village of Theale, has been kept in readiness for occupation for more than a year by his English valet.

Rosa Raisa's Charges 'Rubbish,' Says Insull

ATHENS, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Samuel Insull today denied irregularity in stock dealings with Rosa Raisa, as charged by the former Chicago Civic Opera star yesterday. He said:

"It's all rubbish—absolutely rubbish."

The singer said she and her husband had lost $500,000 in investments made at Insull's suggestion, and that he was reluctant to show her the stocks she had purchased. Insull said:

"She never invested so much money, and the stocks she did buy were duly delivered by my representatives."

American Minister Lincoln MacVeigh announced today he had received instructions to visa Insull's passport if requested to do so by the Greek government.

Judge Holds Insull Firms 'Ripe' for Receivership

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Evan A. Evans declared today that Insull utility investments were "hopelessly ripe" for receivership at least eight or ten months before proceedings were instituted.

The remark from the bench came as Attorney Samuel A. Ettelson shouted charges that Samuel Insull, Sr., dictated the receiverships, declaring:

"The receivership of utility investments was framed by plain, downright jugglery, not on the part of shyster lawyers, but by prominent lawyers and big bankers and business men."

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The hearing of the appeal of Martin J. Insull, former Chicago utilities operator, against extradition to the United States to face trial on charges of embezzlement and theft, was adjourned sine die today by a weekly Sessions Court.

Justice Charles Garrow said he would announce later his decision on the question of returning Insull to Chicago.

EMPLOYMENT SHOWS DROP

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Secretary Perkins said today that employment in manufacturing industries dropped 3.5 per cent between October 15 and November 15, the first decline since last March.

Employment in November, however, she said, was 20.2 per cent higher than in the same month a year ago and 29.6 per cent higher than last March.

She estimated that 2,500,000 more workers were on jobs in manufacturing industries in November than in March.

Stork at Disney Home, Mickey, Pigs Eclipsed

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Monday was a big day for Walt Disney—you know, "The Three Little Pigs" and "Mickey Mouse."

At a banquet he was presented with a medal for distinguished service to childhood, the award being based on the enjoyment children have derived from "Mickey Mouse."

Mrs. Disney is the former Lillian Bound of Lewiston, Ida.

A group of 75 guests at the banquet were at a loss to understand Disney's hurried departure. Dr. Rufus von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California, who acted as toastmaster, was as surprised as the rest, but all was forgiven when the whole story developed at the Good Samaritan Hospital.

Ruler of Tibit, Buddha's 'Re-Incarnation,' Dies

International News Service.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 19. — The Dalai Lama, spiritual and temporal ruler of Tibet, died today at Lhasa at the age of 60.

One of the most powerful, and yet the least known, rulers in the world, the Dalai Lama was regarded by his two million followers as the reincarnation of Buddha, and worshipped as such by the mysterious Asiatic inhabiting the Tibetan Plateau.

Supreme in both civil and religious affairs, he was chosen by the heads of the three chief Buddhist monasteries of Lhasa, who were guided in their selection by the state oracle at Lhasa and the oracle at Sam-Ye.

Prior to 1912, a duly accredited representative of the Chinese government had a voice in choosing the Dalai Lama, but since that time the local religious leaders and the oracles have enjoyed absolute authority in their selection of a ruler.

TEX GUINAN'S TREASURES GET 'POOR HAND' AT AUCTION

NICKEL, DIME BIDS ANGER BARKER

Housewives, Jobless Men Jam Sale; Friends Absent

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—They didn't give Texas Guinan a very big hand today, two blocks east of Broadway.

If the shade of Broadway's most famous night club hostess was watching, she must have been pointing her thumbs toward the ground.

For, although the auctioneer's room was jammed, while the jewelry of La Guinan went under the hammer, it was full of strangers, of curious housewives and shrewd dealers, of unemployed men and newspaper reporters who did not know Texas.

That would not have been Texas' idea of a good show. Nor did it seem so good to Benjamin Marx, the auctioneer, who did his best with stories studded with the names of the Prince of Wales, David Belasco, Lillian Russell, President Harding, President Wilson and Amy Leslie. He scolded several times about "nickels and dimes."

CROWD THINS OUT

And when, by noon, about $8,571.50 worth of jewelry, including 10 diamond bracelets and five imitation diamond ones, had been sold, the crowd thinned out.

What made it especially bitter was that Walter B. Salinger, executor for Texas' estate, said the jewelry cost the night club queen $30,000 — not counting gifts.

Gifts were plentiful. The prince's, inscribed with "Listen, Miss Tex,—E.," went for $115 to Sam Richman, a dealer; Woodrow Wilson's silver gilt clock for $15 to S. H. Hindleman, another dealer; Belasco's pearl bracelet, worth less today than when the producer gave it to Texas, because she had repairs made with artificial pearls, cost G. Wilson, a dealer, $155.

The star piece of the sale was a diamond braclet with a couple of dozen big diamonds and 586 small ones, which sold for $1,875. To a dealer, of course.

SENTIMENT LACKING

Some of Broadway's celebrities turned out, but they stayed only long enough to see there was precious little sentiment being wasted on a departed night club queen, and two of them, Helen Menken and Madame Maria Jeritza, failed to get in at all. The crowd around the door frightened them off.

Charles Hopkins, the producer; Belle Livingstone, herself a hostess of no little repute, and Marguerita Sylva, of the Met., were there. But "Tommy" Manville, of the Park avenue Manvilles, was reported to have been feazed by the crowd.

Several Mrs. O'Briens bid and won small pieces, undiscouraged by Marx's candid admissions that "here's a gold and real platinum ring—real gold and real platinum—but the diamond is made of glass."

DENTIST SOLD LOVE NOTES OF WOMAN

International News Service.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 19.—Beautiful married women wrote Dr. Leonard Siever, 44, "Don Juan of dentistry," scores of love letters.

Dr. Siever, Pasadena bachelor socialite dentist, filed them away carefully in his luxurious apartment.

Then he sold for $450 one package of love letters to the husband of the woman who wrote them to him, after the woman had confessed to her spouse her reckless romance.

But the dentist kept several of the letters.

SUSPECT IS CLEARED

Thomas Bennett, 35, who was questioned in connection with the murder, was cleared and freed by Police Chief Charles Kelley, of Pasadena. Bennett was taken into custody after a pistol similar in caliber to the one used to kill Dr. Siever was found under a pillow at Bennett's home.

Bennett is the son of Peter Bennett, caretaker of the Scottish Rite Cathedral, whose giant stone sphinxes apparently were the only witnesses to Dr. Siever's murder during a blinding rainstorm last Tuesday night.

So police today returned to the theory that a jealous woman, "a woman scorned," was the mysterious assassin who lurked in the shadows of the cathedral and shot Dr. Siever to death.

Many beautiful women have been questioned, and the questioning is to continue, detectives indicated, because they are convinced that a woman holds the secret to the death plot.

LINK THREE WOMEN

A woman held a whispered conference with Dr. Siever in his office a few hours before he was shot to death—another woman walked through a library near the murder scene and asked "when will they have Dr. Siever's funeral?"—another woman, married, held romantic rendezvous at least twice with Dr. Siever in a Southern California resort hotel. These facts were known to police.

Police learned that Dr. Siever had exhibited a check for $450 made out by the husband in question and had laughingly called it "the big payoff."

Dr. Siever said the check was for "dental work," but his books revealed no payment of such an amount.

A theory that the murder followed robbery of Dr. Siever was discarded by officers who declared that somewhere in the tangled maze of clues they hoped to definitely discover a clue that would lead to—

The woman in the case.

SINCLAIR LEWIS WALKS OUT ON BANQUET

Irked By Camermen He Leaves Einstein, Other Notables

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Sinclair Lewis, the former Sauk Center (Minn.) redhead who made good in practically every language, including the Scandinavian, wants to know "why the hell I should have to stand up and be photographed?"

The ex-Minnesotan who exposed "Main Street" and won a Nobel Prize in literature raised the question last night at a banquet honoring the memory of Alfred Bernhard Nobel, founder of the fund from which the Nobel prizes are awarded.

To emphasize his distaste for the cinematic arts Lewis walked out on the banquet, leaving behind a distinguished company including three other Nobel prize winners—Dr. Albert Einstein, Dr. Irving Langmuir and Lewis' fellow Minnesotan, Frank B. Kellogg.

MISSES THE SOUP

Twenty minutes later he walked back in. All he missed were the cocktail (fruit) and the soup (tomato). He picked up with gusto at the entree and went right on through to the demitasse and finger bowl without further untoward event.

Lewis sat between Dr. Einstein—special guest of honor, the banquet having been arranged in tribute also to all living American winners of the Nobel prizes—and Miss Anne Morgan. Photographers had arranged to take pictures, still and motion, of the guests on the dias, and were well on with their pleasant chore when Lewis showed signs of impatience. His Nobel colleague, Dr. Einstein, as well as Dr. Langmuir and Mr. Kellogg displayed no evidence of annoyance, but Lewis was irked.

OUT HE STRIDES

He pushed back his chair, arose and strode from the banquet hall. He said, testily:

"This is the first banquet I have attended in five years, and I don't see why in hell I should have to stand up and be photographed."

Lewis, who had fled to a room he had engaged in the hotel in which the banquet was held, finally responded to entreaties and reappeared in the seat at Dr. Einstein's right. The repast proceeded to a tranquil conclusion, with a principal address by Mr. Kellogg and a shorter one by Dr. Einstein.

Afterward Lewis, who was on the receiving end of a slap from the palm of a fellow novelist, Theodore Dreiser, at a gathering of literary folk in 1931, explained his viewpoint to inquirers. He said:

And he screwed his face in illustration.

CERMAK GUARD SHOT IN ROW

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—A former bodyguard of the late Mayor Cermak and a deputy sheriff were wounded seriously this morning in an exchange of shots between the former and Alderman Mathias (Paddy) Bauler, political power in the Forty-third Ward. The battle took place at Bauler's tavern, where Democratic party leaders had gathered after a Christmas benefit party.

The most seriously hurt was Chief Deputy Sheriff Frank Wright, 43, who was caught in the cross fire. The other, Policeman John Ahern, 31, who fought it out with the tavern keeper, had been Cermak's bodyguard during a tour of Europe.

Among the Democratic leaders said to have been present at the theater party, which preceded the tavern shooting, were Mayor Kelly, Sheriff Meyering and County Commissioner Charles Weber, in front of whose beer distributing plant Gus Winkler was shot down recently in a gang assassination.

BANDITS ROB 3 WOMEN

Summoned to the door of her home last midnight, Kate Brogan, of 14 State alley, was robbed of $9 by two men, according to police.

Another woman, Phyllis Martin, of 6221 Frankstown avenue, lost a purse containing $30 and two rings when, police say, a purse snatcher accosted her near her home.

Forcing the manager and clerk of the Parkway pharmacy, Hobart and Wightman streets, to the basement, a well-dressed robber last night escaped with $50 from the cash register.

Police said Lester Cochrane, the store manager, and Horace McClure, clerk, were alone at the time of the robbery. The thief, police say, escaped in an automobile believed to have been stolen.

Mrs. Allan Clark, of 973 Washington boulevard, was waiting for a street car near Lincoln avenue bridge, East Liberty, at 8:15 a. m. today when, police say, a young man snatched her purse and fled. The purse contained $10, a diamond wedding ring and two other things, she told police.

HARPO MARX 'WOWS' SOVIETS

Making his first appearance before a Russian audience in his celebrated knife-dropping act, the American comedian literally brought down the house in the Music Hall as a capacity audience of usually phlegmatic Soviet theatergoers applauded, stamped, cheered and whistled for 25 minutes during and after his six-minute act.

He wore a wig, played a harp and preserved his usual waggish silence and was assisted by two members of the cast of the Moscow Art Theater, with whom he had rehearsed for 10 days.

He will play here six days and afterward will open in the Moscow Music Hall Theater.

BROWN'S PLEA FOR BOYS VAIN

Former County Public Works Director Norman F. Brown pleaded in vain in East End Police Court today for release of two young Negroes, one of whom admitted stealing Brown's World War pistol.

The gun was one of several stolen from the home of Brown's daughter, Mrs. Mary Binns, 6039 Jackson street, recently, he testified. He had the guns there for safe-keeping, he said. Brown resides in Schenley Apartments.

Robert Russell, 24, of 5918 Bryant street, formerly employed by the Binns as a chauffeur, is said to have admitted taking the revolver and selling it for $7 to John Harvard, 23, of 5630 Harvard street. The latter is said to have explained he bought the revolver without knowing it had been stolen.

Brown told Magistrate William A. Means:

"I don't want to prosecute and see these boys in custody over the holidays."

The magistrate replied:

"This is too serious a matter to dismiss. I will turn them over to the Detective Bureau for investigation."

FEAR FOR DOG KILLS BOY

PORTSMOUTH, O., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Collapsing from fright caused by fear that his pet dog would be killed, Kenneth Colley, 14, died suddenly today.

Theb oy, son of John Colley, was playing with his dog when the animal was bitten by another dog suspected of having rabies.

The Scioto County dog warden killed the afflicted dog. Seeing the killing, Kenneth collapsed and died before medical aid could be summoned.

Coroner Ross Moore Gault said the child died of acute dilation of the heart brought on by fright. Kenneth's mother and a brother died under simiuar circumstances, Gault said.

SONG COMPOSER UNDER KNIFE

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Con Conrad, the song writer who wrote "Barney Google" and Memory Lane," was recovering today after an operation for a serious throat infection, in a Manhattan hospital.

Told that he could be out in two weeks, the song writer was continuing plans for his marriage to his former secretary, Leona Zadeck, of Hollywood, the week after he leaves the hospital.

Miss Zadeck was to leave California tonight to join him in New York.

Conrad, who was formerly the husband of Francine Larrimore, screen actress, came to New York from Hollywood three weeks ago.

He discovered four days ago that he was unable to speak; and his physician decreed an immediate operation.

17 Elephants Found Dead in Cornfield

MADURA, Madras, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Seventeen elephants were found dead in a cornfield in the Cumbum Valley today after an all-night feast.

It was not known whether the corn poisoned the elephants or whether they were attracted from the hills by the scent of ripening grain—and just ate themselves to death.

SHOTS FLY NEAR WHITE HOUSE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Navy and postal authorities today were searching for men who fired upon a Navy mail truck immediately behind the White House early today, slightly injuring a Marine guard.

The Navy truck was making a regular delivery from the post-office to the Navy Building. As the truck passed behind the White House a shot shattered the windshield, showering Private Leo Ensmier with glass. Reed Stokes, driver, was uninjured.

WRIGHT PLANE MAY RETURN

International News Service.

DAYTON, O., Dec. 19.—Orville Wright, co-inventor of the airplane, stated here today that he is willing to re-open negotiations with the Smithsonian Institution to return to the United States the original craft, in which he and his brother made their flight 30 years ago.

The cveted craft now is in Scientists' Museum at Kensington, England.

Willingness of Wright to have his plane returned to America was made known by the co-inventor following receipt of a communication from Charles E. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

WOODIN TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

International News Service.

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 19.—Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin was removed by ambulance from the home of his son, William H. Woodin, Jr., to a local hospital.

Physicians, however, declared that his condition was "not any more serious" than it had been.

No one was permitted to visit Secretary Woodin.

Punished in School, Boy Hangs Himself

BILLINGS, Mont., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Raymond Goodman, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goodman, was held after school because he had whispered in class. Late yesterday his body was found hanging from a beam in the blacksmith shop of his father's farm.

His brother, Edward, 14, said he saw him take a rope into the shop, but thought he was putting it away.

One-Day-Old Child Has Two Teeth

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dent, of Madison, are the parents of an unusual child. It was born on Friday night and on Saturday night it had two teeth, they said. Appearances of a tooth 24 hours after birth was declared "very rare," by physicians.

TWO IN CAR ROB DRUG CLERK

Christ Wolcott, clerk in a drug-store at 5741 Walnut street, was held up and robbed of $146 in cash and $20 in checks—yesterday's receipts—as he started for the East Liberty Savings and Trust Company today.

Wolcott, sent to the bank by Albert Finkis, the proprietor, walked from the store to near the intersection of College avenue and Elmer street. A car pulled to the curb in front of him. One stepped out and thrust a revolver into the clerk's ribs. The bandit said:

"Hand over the cash!"

Wolcott took it from an inside pocket and handed it over. Then the bandit said:

"You go back where you came from and don't you let out a peep until you get there!"

Wolcott did. He didn't get the number of the car in which the bandit and his companion escaped.

Playboy McCready Gets Writ Backstage

The show must go on, even if there is a constable backstage waiting for Harrison McCready, the playboy. Backstage at the Variety, burlesque theater, where McCready is making his stage debut, a writ of attachment for $185 brought by a Pittsburgh store is said to have been served on him.

The writ directs McCready's guardian, the Union Trust Company, to be represented before Alderman Thomas D. Jones Thursday. McCready is said to have accepted the writ and then to have appeared in the performance.

MAN FROM HERE ON SUICIDE SHIP

LARNACA, Cyprus, Dec. 19.—(AP.—The crew of the American steamer Exarch, whose captain killed himself, made plans to discharge the steamer's cargo today after failing in efforts to tow her off the rocks.

The captain committed suicide early Sunday after his vessel ran aground at midnight Saturday on the North Coast of Cyprus.

Under the direction of subordinates, the body was prepared today to be sent to the United States for burial.

James H. Budd, 26, a former Pittsburgher and son of Mrs. Georgia Budd, of the Iroquois Apartments, Forbes street, is second mate of the steamer Exarch. He attended Peabody High School and later was graduated from the Pennsylvania Nautical School. He has been in the merchant marine service for eight years.

Mrs. Budd said today neither she nor her son's wife in Brooklyn, N. Y., had received direct word from him of the Exarch's mishap. It was his first misfortune at sea.

Coal Digger Dies In Abandoned Mine

An unidentified, unemployed miner lost his life today while digging coal in an abandoned mine in Clever road, near Moon Run, the Coroner's office was notified today.

According to Stowe Township police the man was crushed to death by a fall of slate.

Pen Guard Stabbed By Mystery Convict

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—A. H. Baumeister, a guard at the state prison, was stabbed four times early this morning and seriously wounded by an unknown convict at the institution.

Baumeister is in the prison hospital where physicians said it is doubtful if he will recover. Prison officials questioned 25 convicts in an effort to learn the identity of his assailant.

Coopers in West To Spend Holidays

PHOENIX, Ariz., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Gary Cooper, of the films, and his bride, Sandra Shaw, also of the movies, arrived here yesterday to spend the holidays. They were married recently in New York.

The newlyweds were joined here by Cooper's parents, Judge and Mrs. Charles H. Cooper, of Hollywood. The bride's mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shields, of New York, accompanied them here.

Ben Avon Hunter Ill With Rabbit Fever

Herbert H. Cahoon, architect and sportsman, of 7416 Perrysville avenue, Ben Avon, is recovering in his home from what is said to be one of the few genuine cases in this state of tularemia, or rabbit fever.

While hunting seven weeks ago, Cahoon shot a rabbit, and with two companions ate it. Two days later he became ill. His friends suffered no ill effects. Later he concluded that he became infected through briar scratches to his hand while cleaning the rabbit.

Swellings developed under his arms, his muscles became sore as if with the grip and he ran a temperature of 103.2 for three weeks.

According to Cahoon, Dr. A. H. Gross, of Bellevue, diagnosed the disease at once although he had never had a case of rabbit fever. The first culture sent to the National Research Bureau, Washington, came back negative but two subsequent blood tests revealed presence of the disease.

For a number of years Cahoon has been secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Field-Trial Club.

Man Fed Girl on Lap Ice Cream, Wife Charges

Less than five months after he was married, Mal J. Cosby, of Atwood street, held another woman in his lap and fed her ice cream, Mrs. Katherine Cosby testified today in seeking a divorce.

The wife, a registered nurse, of 1223 Milton avenue, Swissvale, said she saw the incident when she returned home from work one night to find they had company. She didn't know any of the men and women guests, she said.

While the woman in Cosby's lap was being fed, the wife testified, another sat on the arm of his chair.

They were married August 29, 1927, and separated the following January 14. He told her once, she said, that he had made a mistake when he married her.

Among other grievances the wife aired before Judge Ralph H. Smith was the presence of Cosby's sister in their home. She said they got along well enough until the sister came to live with them. There were numerous quarrels thereafter, she said.

CHILD JOB CURB BACKERS WIN IN SENATE

At the same time it was reported out the child labor amendment the Judiciary General Committee killed the Fitzgerald wage bill and the Kane bill abolishing the coal and iron police.

Social legislation advocates today were uncertain whether they would make an effort through a vote of the Senate to discharge the committee from consideration of the minimum wage bill. Such action would have to be taken today, in order to give the bill a chance.

To guard against possible success of an organization effort to recommit the Craig bill in the Senate, an effort will be made this evening to force the Salus bill to the House floor if the Committee on Constitutional Amendments does not report it. Suspension of the rules will be necessary as a first move, and a fight is assured.

AMENDMENTS FUTILE

Amendments to the Fitzgerald bill, prepared by Senator Bertham G. Frazier, of Philadelphia, eliminating the Department of Labor and Industry from administration of the minimum wage regulations, failed to swing a majority of the committee. The bill was a product of the legislative sweapshop investigation of last summer, and was advocated by Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, member of the committee and wife of the Governor.

The coal and iron police bill was killed on the basis that is did not come within the call for the special session.

Judge M. A. Musmanno, of Allegheny County, who during his legislative service introduced the first bill to abolish coal and iron police, appeared before the committee to plead for its passage. He said:

"This committee has now in two succeeding sessions refused to approve legislation eliminating the coal and iron police system. This is the third time it has the opportunity to do what it might well have done in the first place. And you may as well pass it now, because it will return ever session until it is done."

SALUS BILL SAVED

By the margin of a single vote, 24 to 23, furnished by Senator Joseph G. Armstrong, of Pittsburgh, the Salus bill was saved from oblivion last night in the Senate.

Senator Leon G. Prince, of Carlisle, moved to send the Salus resolution back to committee when it was reached on the calendar. He was supported by Senator Mason G. Owlett, of Tioga, chairman of the Legislative sweatshop committee, who in a minority report two weeks ago recommended that such matters be left to the operations of the NRA and Federal codes.

SENATORS WARNED

Senator Henry Snyder (Dem.), Lehigh, warned the Senators that they were voting directly on the question of child labor, and Senator Frank J. Harris, of Pittsburgh, insisted, when the vote finally came, that a roll call should be recorded.

On this roll call all of the Allegheny Senators but Senator James J. Coyne voted to keep the bill on the calendar. The entire Philadelphia delegation also voted to keep the measure alive.

It was recognized that the result would be close, and there was a tense air of expectancy as the name of Senator Armstrong, first on the list, was called. The Senator from Pittsburgh's South Side in a loud voice voted against the move to kill the bill, and from then on down the rosters the "ayes" and "nays" followed closely what has been expected. However, there was some surprise at the adverse vote by Coyne, even though he is aligned with the regular Republican organization, which was out to knife the measure.

COYNE CHANGES VOTE

Defeated in an effort to strike the bill from the calendar, the Senate next proceeded to vote directly on the bill, which was approved by a vote of 30 to 17. On this roll call Senator Coyne, who appeared to be busily writing at his desk, had to have his name called three times before he voted no, or against ratification of the child labor amendment.

After the roll call had been completed the Senator rose to change his vote, explaining that he had voted under a misapprehension.

Except for the child labor amendment, the Senate turned thumbs down on every other phase of the social legislation program last night, and prepared to maintain that attitude. The Fitzgerald minimum wage bill has been flagged, as well as the railroad full crew bill, which is being opposed by all of the railroads with lines in the state.

The Senate vote last night on the motion to kill the Salus resolution ratifying the national child labor amendment by sending it back to committee follows:

Charles H. Ealy, Somerset; Frank L. Fay, Greenville; Frederick T. Geider, Forest City; Laning Harvey, Wilkes-Barre; John G. Homsher, Strasburg; G. Mason Owlett, Wellsboro; Chauncey W. Parkinson, Waynesburg; William D. Pethick, Honesdale; Henry J. Pierson, Lititz; Leon C. Prince, Carlisle.

Richard S. Quigley, Lockhaven; George L. Reed, Harrisburg; Harry B. Scott, Philipsburg; Charles W. Jones, Williamsport; Joseph R. Ziesenheim, Erie.

Those who voted to keep the bill on the calendar and thus saved it from defeat:

Edward B. Bennett, Indiana; Peter Graff, Worthington; Henry E. Lanius, Spring Grove; Charles E. Miller, Mt. Carmel; James E. Norton, Reading; John S. Rice, Biglerville; Warren R. Roberts, Bethlehem; Henry W. Snyder, Emaus; Andrew J. Sordani, Kingston; Charles W. Staudenmeir, Ashland; Benjamin H. Thompson, New Kensington; Richard W. Williamson, Huntingdon.

On final passage, these Senators switched to support the bill:

50-Million Vet Bonus Finally Voted in House

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The House today unanimously passed two bills to enable payment of 50 million dollars in bonuses to Pennsylvania's soldiers and sent the measures to the Senate for concurrence in amendments.

Both measures were passed previously by both houses, but were recalled from the Governor for changes to strengthen them.

As altered, the bills set forth that in cases where a veteran has died, his bonus shall be paid to his estate of beneficiaries.

The bills are in a position to be approved finally by the Senate before adjournment and returned to the Governor's desk. The money will not be available for many months, however, because much technical work must be done before the distribution can start.

GARBAGE BOND CUT VOTED

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—Legislation which may result in lower costs of garbage collection in Pittsburgh through long term contracts, today had passed the Senate.

Sponsored by Senator William D. Mansfield, it provides that persons receiving contracts for more than one year need file a bond only for half the cost of the first year of the contract. Present law, according to official interpretations, would require the minimum bond to be half the amount of the full contract.

The object is to induce contractors to bid for longer contracts without pauperizing themselves in furnishing a bond. The result, it is expected, will be lower bids for long term contracts.

N. Y. RUM HELD ADULTERATED

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Pressing his campaign against subterfuge in the selling of whisky, Dr. Shirley Wynne, city Health Commissioner, declared he would seek a law to make failure of specifically labeling liquor punishable as a misdemeanor.

The Health Commissioner, before his conference today with distillers' representatives and Edward P. Mulrooney, state alcohol "czar," disclosed that an analysis of 25 samples of liquor taken from restaurants showed that 40 per cent of it was "imitation whisky." whisky."

'TB' Sanitarium Bill Passes Finally

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Construction of an $800,000 state tuberculosis sanitarium, possibly in Northwestern Pennsylvania, is provided in a bill sent to Gov. Gifford Pinchot for his signature today.

Assembly to Study Rum Store System

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—With state stores opening to the drinking public in just two weeks, the Legislature today created a commission to study reaction to their operation.

PENSION BILLS FINALLY WIN IN SENATE

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—A Republican-controlled Senate that blocked old age pensions during the regular 1933 General Assembly session gave overwhelming approval to the two Blumberg old age assistance bills without debate this afternoon.

The bill setting up machinery for payments of $30 monthly to heads of families more than 70 years of age and $15 monthly for each additional member of the family over 70 or child under 15 years reecived a unanimous 46 to 0 vote.

Only the opposition vote of Senator Fay, Mercer, was recorded against the second bill appropriating six million dollars from liquor funds to finance the pensions.

This success on Gov. Gifford Pinchot's old age pension program followed shortly after the House returned his graduated income tax bill to committee, where it is likely to meet death if final adjournment is realized this Thursday.

BACK TO COMMITTEE

The bill, which appropriated revenues derived from the tax for the use of educational institutions, was returned to committee on the motion of Representative Thomas Wilson, McKean. He claimed its provisions were unfair to the smaller school districts.

The House cleared its decks of liquor legislation by passing finally two Witkin bills amending the Witkin and Cordier liquor tax acts. Both were relayed to the Senate.

One of the measures extends until December 31, 1934, the time for the payment of the $2 per proof gallon floor tax on prerepeal liquor. The second would permit the commonwealth to participate in any "pooling" of liquor taxes to be adopted by the federal government.

The Senate added its approval to the Lose bill appropriating $1,310,000 from liquor revenues for blind pensions. The vote, which sent the measure to the Governor's desk was 46 to 0.

PUBLIC WORKS VOTED

Similar action was taken on the Scott bill authorizing a 14 million dollar public works program. The vote on this measure, however, was 45 to 1. It was relayed to the House.

The Hoopes anti-eviction bill fell under an 89 to 35 roll-call in the lower chamber. Defeat also was meted out to the Reed bill appropriating two million dollars for improvements to the park at the State Capitol.

The Buckman bill extending provisions of the state health laws to include milk went back to the Senate for concurrence in minor amendments after being passed finally by the lower body.

The Negley bill concerning deficiency judgments and providing methods for determining the amount and the disposition of costs in cases involving the fair market value of property sold was passed by the House by a vote of 197 to 0.

By a vote of 200 to 0, the House also passed finally the Price bill relating to executions, providing for the entry of deficiency judgments and limiting the amount for which writs of execution may issue.

Gunmen Hijack Wines, Champagne

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Prohibition gang methods were used today when a truckload of egal wines and champagne was hijacked, at the point of guns.

As the truck stopped momentarily, two men boarded it, forcing the driver to proceed to a different section of town, where the load was transferred under protection of machine guns.

House Asks State Share U. S. Rum Tax

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The House tonight adopted a resolution urging Congress to pass legislation to enable the return of half the liquor revenue to the state.

The resolution was sponsored by Philip Sterling, Philadelphia.

PINCHOT FIGHT FOR P. S. C. MEN POSTPONED

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—The Pinchot administration, which is as foggy on its legislative strategy as the Republican organization, last night suddenly revised its plans to force an immediate Senate vote on discharge of the Senate Committee on Executive Nominations, which for more than a year has held up action of five of Gov. Pinchot's appointees to the Public Sevice Commission. It may try today.

However camouflaged, the reason was that the administration lacked the votes to force the nominations to the floor.

Pinchot scouts kept close check on the changing attitude of Senators, and at the convening of the Senate discovered that a number of Senators on whom they had counted had gotten off the reservation.

Mr. Pinchot's condition has also disrupted the plan to call a special session of the Senate for Thursday afternoon to act on his nominees, if nothing is done before final adjournment of the special session.

It is believed that the Governor will not return to Harrisburg before the Christmas holidays, but will go direct to Milford, his Pike County home.

Pinchot strategists today were devising a plan whereby the Governor shortly after the first of the year would summon the Senate back to a special session to act on the commissioners. Actually, in the absence of votes, the pinch hitters for Mr. Pinchot don't know what the next step is to be, and an attempt at forecast is absurd.

COYNE BATTLES AUTHORITY BILL

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—The Allegheny County Authority bill today was at the tender mercies of a subcommittee, which at a meeting last night declined to consider the demand of Senator James J. Coyne that no federal money should be spent by the Commissioners for acquisition of the Wabash bridge and tunnel.

Other suggested amendments were in the hopper, but will not be determined until today.

If Senator Coyne is adamant in his demand the purchase of the Wabash property be eliminated, the bill either will be killed or the Senator's demands will be met—as the measure must go to the conference in the Senate, where Coyne is supreme on Allegheny County affairs.

LEAGUE PLEADS FOR TAX BILLS

Letters urging favorable votes on bills designed to aid the 210,000 property owners of the county were sent to State Senators today by the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League. The letters read in part:

"We have every reason to believe that the Sterling Income Tax Bill and the Spann Delinquent Tax Abatement Bill will be passed by the House and placed on the Senate calendar in time for you to pass it in the Senate.

"The 210,000 real estate taxpayers of Allegheny County are looking to you to provide revenue through the income tax bill to continue the operation of the public school system in Pennsylvania as it should be operated."

Delay in Sale Of Liquor Here By State Seen

Pittsburgh will eventually have nine liquor stores instead of eight as originally announced by MacGregor, he said today, but whether Pittsburghers will be able to buy liquor at the stores by January 2, he refused to say, explaining:

"I think we still have time to get the stores under way."

LOCATION CHANGED

Location of a store in McKeesport will be changed, upon request of the McKeesport School Board, MacGregor disclosed, adding:

"We were glad to comply with the board's request."

Legal liquor, it developed in Pittsburgh today, does not mean simply legalizing liquor sales by racketeers and speakeasy boys who were among the first to obtain liquor licenses and became "respectable."

DRIVE ON RACKETS

The 20 or more agents of the Department of Revenue who have been investigating liquor licenses here have uncovered more than one of the fair haired boys of the prohibition era, and this information is being sent to the Liquor Board, which has the power to revoke licenses.

Some of these licenses, it seems, were obtained under false pretense, the applicants forgetting to put down the fact that they had been arrested for violation of the liquor laws.

HOUSE SPEEDS GRADED TAX

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—The Senate Committee on Municipal Affairs today reported favorably the Powers bill, embracing the McNair five-to-one tax plan for Pittsburgh.

The measure immediately passed first reading.

It proposes that the present two-to-one graded tax plan shall be gradually altered until in six years the ratio of taxation shall be on land five times that on buildings.

Ships Off Dry Coasts Must Not Sell Rum

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Serving liquor by ships in waters of dry states was formally outlawed by the government today as an official said the Coast Guard would assist the states in maintaining the sovereignty of their coast waters to the three-mile limit.

A report reaching Washington from the Georgia coast said ships no longer were observing the three-mile rule in serving liquor.

WHISKY STOCKS FACING PROBE BY PECORA

By ARTHUR HACHTEN

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Evidence that "pools" in whisky stocks on the New York Stock Exchange cleaned up hugh profits last summer, has been discovered in files of brokerage firms by investigators for the Senate banking committee, it is learned.

After the commitee completes its investigation into the closing of Detroit banks, which begins today and is expected to last a month, Ferdinand Pecora, special committee counsel, plans to trace the wild gyrations in stocks of distilleries.

STOCKS MANIPULATED

With the public eager to buy whisky stocks last summer, when the parade of the states for repeal indicated the eighteenth amendment soon would be ripped out of the Constitution, cliques were formed in Wall street to manipulate stocks in well known companies, Pecora's investigators reported.

Spectacular advances in common stock of American Commercial Alcohol, which soared from $18 to $85 in a few weeks, the skyrocketing of National Distillers' stock and other widely known whisky companies, will be inquired into at the Senate committee's public hearings, it is indicated.

Since committee investigators began delving into the boom in whisky securities last September, "pools" or syndicates in them have not been so active. Some of the stocks have declined sharply.

EVIDENCE AT HAND

Pecora's aides believe they have in the gyrations of whisky stocks, tangible evidence of manipulation and thwarting of a free and open market.

His investigators are examining the replies of stock market brokers to the committee's qeustionnaire on accounts of "pools," syndicates, margin traders and on other phases of their business. The findings will be laid before the committee shortly.

County Relief Probe Motion in Senate

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—A resolution calling for investigation of the Allegheny County Relief Board and its conduct was reported from Senate committee last night. It has been passed by the House.

High Court Justices Won't Free Rum Men

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Hopes of nearly a dozen convicts in the federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., for release from sentences imposed for prohibition law violations by means of habeas corpus petitions to the Supreme Court have been shattered.

Chief Justice Hughes and several other members of the court yesterday denied the petitions, based on the ground that the laws under which the prisoners had been convicted had been repealed. It was stated such proceedings should be started in the district courts.

Relief Head Urges Good Bands in Beer Gardens

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Harry L. Hopkins would like to see bands—good ones; not the brassy, oompah kind—in beer gardens and other public places.

The reasons, said the emergency relief director, are multifold:

"It would be a great employment relief measure. It would encourage people to go out and sit around and talk and forget their troubles. It should, however, be only a first-class job."

MORTGAGE BILL ASSAILED

Mark R. Craig, chairman of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Board, yesterday warned that a bill now pending in the Legislature would make those holding mortgages virtually purchasers of the mortgaged properties and consequently liable for all claims against the property on forced sale.

The bill, known as House Bill No. 132, he added, places a mortgage in peril at any time that another person holding a claim against a property sold to satisfy his judgment wants to contest the sale. He concluded:

"The effect of the measure is to make the mortgagee liable to all who hold subsequent liens for the difference between the amount of his mortgage, interest and costs, and the fair market value of the premises, which would be determined by a court-approved board of viewers."

WIFE REVEALS M'ALLISTER'S WEALTH

Dorothy Imhoff McAllister, 43, of Royal Yorke Apartments, established yesterday in her action for a limited divorce that her husband, Raymond P. McAllister, has $323,274 in actual cash.

Mrs McAllister said she has received only $1,400 from her husband since last May, when they separated. It was shown by an accountant, L. C. Stephens, that McAllister spent $20,000 last year in maintaining himself in the family home in North Highland avenue.

The question of alimony was brought up in connection with the suit, heard by Judge Ralph H. Smith.

Mrs. McAllister's counsel, Oliver K. Eaton, sought to ascertain her husband's ability to pay for her in accordance with her station of life. McAllister's net worth was given as $617,575, which included a $16,000 yacht.

Mrs. McAllister charges cruel and barbarous treatment. No defense was offered. At the conclusion of argument Judge Smith requested counsel to submit briefs.

Helen Peake, of 3640 Massachusetts avenue, yesterday filed a petition for annulment of her marriage to Eugene H. Peake, of 1212 Theona street.

Mrs. Peake said that when Peake married her July 16, 1931, at Wheeling, he was already married to Della B. Markin.

Mrs. Peake was refused a divorce on charges of desertion last week, the court holding she should have asked annulment on the basis of pre-existing marriage.

Divorce suits were filed by Lillian Flusser against Samuel Flusser, Edgar S. Milner against Elizabeth Milner and Norman Simon against Betty Simon.

His Boat Home Sunken

HOME ON RIVER 'WASHED OUT'

Houseboat dwellers for more than 11 years, Charlie Mitchell and his wife, Annie, were homeless today—driven to the shelter of neighbors by a rising river.

Although Mitchell had been unemployed two years, the couple had been happy on the houseboat, beached on the bank of the Monongahela River above the Glenwood bridge.

But the Monongahela, swollen by the unseasonable rains, started to creep up on the old houseboat yesterday morning. When water reached the bottom of the boat, Mitchell expected it would float, but soon discovered it had frozen tight to the "stilts" on which it had been moored.

When the river had moved into the living quarters, Mrs. Mitchell hurriedly packed a few belongings, got into a rowboat and moved to a neighboring houseboat, but her husband stayed on, trying to hold back the water with a hand pump. With him was his dog, Jack.

But the river kept rising until two and a half feet covered the boat's deck. Then Mitchell left.

Now he is wondering what an unemployed family is to do when its home is washed out from under it.

Retired Klan Head Forms New Group

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—William Joseph Simmons, of Atlanta, retired head of the Ku Klux Klan, has announced formation of a new nation-wide organization to be known as the Nationalists.

It was said that the organization has been working in secret throughout the country for nearly a year, and that following a meeting next Friday it will carry on

O'DUFFY'S PLEA UP TOMORROW

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Gen. Eoin O'Duffy, the blue-shirted co-leader of the United Ireland party, is expected to be produced in court here tomorrow for a hearing on his habeas corpus application.

In the meantime a strong military guard is patrolling the police station at Westport, County Mayo, where he is held following his arrest Sunday night. The situation is quiet, but authorities are taking no chances in view of Sunday's demonstration.

The police declined to make any statement regarding the charges against the general.

Permission was obtained last night to apply for the writ of habeas corpus.

DEALER SLAIN IN BREAD WAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Giuseppe Minardi, a 47-year-old bread dealer, was shot to death shortly after he opened his store on East Fourteenth street today, and police believe he was the victim of bread racketeers.

His wife, Mary, was a witness to the killing.

She said two men came into the store while her husband was in a rear room.

She said one man grabbed a loaf of bread and slammed it onto a scale. He did not look at the indicator, but pointed a revolver at her:

"Where's that husband of yours? Where's Giuseppe?"

Minardi parted the curtains that separated the front of the store from the rear, his wife said, and fired a shot from a revolver into a can of fruit juice on a shelf.

The man who had threatened Mrs. Minardi fired three shots at the grocer, two of them striking their mark.

Selling Papers Found To Boost Scholarship

Newsie of Today Required to Have Good Records

"Paper, Mister?" the newsboy's hail, stirs quick interest and sympathy in most Americans. The boy with an armful of newspapers, crying the latest headlines, profound or trivial excitements of the day, has become a symbol. A young merchant, dealing in pennies, he stands for thrift and enterprise. Hero of many an Horatio Alger tale, he represents ambition and self-reliance.

To some, this symbolic figure of the newsboy suggests the opportunities of a democracy, pride in the self-made men—governors, members of Congress, leaders in industry—who got their start in life selling or delivering newspapers. To others, harking back to the thrillers of yesteryear, it suggests sympathy for an underprivileged gamin of the streets, a homeless waif, sleeping in alleys or in parks, thrust on his own resources by a heartless society.

This latter idea, having just enough foundation in historical fact to give it color, is a far cry from any true conception of the newspaper boy of today. He is much more likely to be the son of a judge or a merchant, learning the value of a dollar in the school of experience, than one of Mr. Alger's street Arabs.

On the average, he is an ordinary, typical American boy, perhaps a little more ambitious and enterprising than most, to whom, in these times, his job is important.

A generation or more ago, when newspaper circulations first began to attain large proportions, the distribution end of the business was frequently in the hands of circulation agents and sub-agents, who controlled their own district organizations independently of the publisher.

These men employed boys, since delivering newspapers is essentially boys' work, and paid them as little as possible. Since compulsory school attendance laws had not then been enacted in most states, boys stayed out of school to sell papers. The social service agencies of those days being often inadequate to succor homeless or neglected children, such waifs naturally turned to selling newspapers.

The carrier boy, hired to deliver papers by an adult contractor who kept most of the money, formed a purely routine job. He simply threw so many papers at so many houses, giving no thought to whether the papers were kept dry, delivered on time, or placed where subscribers could find them.

Publishers saw these evils, realized also that their readers could never be assured prompt and satisfactory service by such a system.

As before, the typical delivery system was based on boys, but there were some important differences—the boys now were given more responsibility, their jobs ceased to be routine, they made more money and were given the incentives of additional rewards and increased opportunity for good work. The change did not mean a saving to the publisher.

In most cases it cost more than the old adult system, but it enabled publishers to give better service to their readers, to assure prompt delivery and to cut down to a minimum the number of complaints from subscribers.

Policies of circulation managements, since newspapers assumed full control of this function, have turned more toward making the newspaper boy a young business man on his own account. Publishers have found that boys, given opportunity and a square deal, take pride in their work and fully merit this additional responsibility.

This system necessitates, of course, selecting the right kind of boys to start with. School attendance and scholarship records have proved the most dependable guide here. Co-operating closely with school authorities, most newspapers require each boy to show a satisfactory school record before giving him a route, and make the continuance of good school work a condition of keeping it.

Since a paper route is an opportunity to earn money for which boys compete eagerly, many teachers have found that it serves as an important incentive to scholarship.

Some of the systems of prizes, bonuses and other rewards now maintained by newspapers for their sales and delivery boys have produced remarkable records for the boys as a group, both in school work and in newspaper work.

The newspaper boy delivery system, giving part-time work to more than half a million boys and enabling them to earn approximately 100 million dollars a year, has become an important adjunct to our educational system, providing a laboratory in which practical business training is correlated with school work.

(This is the second of a series of articles on the newspaper boy. The third article will summarize facts brought out at hearings on the daily newspaper code regarding this 100 million dollar business carried on by schoolboys.)

Mother Charges Sons Stole Washer Motor

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary Oreskovic pleaded in vain with her sons, Steve, 21, and John, 19, when they allegedly took articles from her home and sold them for spending money.

But when she said they sold the electric motor of the washing machine, forcing her to use her knuckles on a washboard, Mrs. Oreskovic decided to tell her troubles to the District Attorney.

M'NAIR URGES GAG ON NEWSIES

Newsboys calling out extra editions are the object of an attack by Mayor-elect William N. McNair, who has presented an ordinance to Council restricting the hours of such sales.

No comment was submitted by the future executive, who passed the proposed ordinance along the usual route that any citizen can pursue. Council yesterday sent it to the committee on public safety after President Harry A. Little stressed in introducing the bill that it was "not of his making."

McNair gave it to Assistant City Clerk Edward Lindsay. An explanatory letter by Attorney Edward Schreiner was attached. Nothing denoted whether the ordinance was prepared by Schreiner or McNair.

The ordinance, which is directed at all vendors, would prohibit the calling out of wares in residential sections between 10 p. m. and 8 a. m. on weekdays, and 10 p. m. and 10 a. m., Sundays. The penalty would be a $3 fine for first offense and $10 for each succeeding violation and from 24 hours to one week imprisonment.

$52,500 Estate Left To Eight Children

An estate valued at $52,500 was bequeathed to eight children in the will of John C. M. Michael, South Fayette Township, filed for probate today. The will provided the widow is to receive the homestead and $100 a month for life, but she died after it was drawn. The heirs named the Potter Title and Trust Company and the oldest son, John C. Michael, executors.

Mrs. Henrietta Wasmund, Mifflin avenue, Wilkinsburg, bequeathed an estate of $9,000 to two daughters, Florence W. O'Neil and Ruth W. Hinkle, and named them executors.

INSURANCE LAW SHUTS ROAD TO WILD DRIVERS

The motorist who has $11,000 he doesn't need has nothing to worry about in the new state uniform automobile liability security act which goes into effect January 1.

But, if you don't have $11,000—you had better think about insurance. That's the only way out.

In a nutshell, the new law provides that a motorist may be barred from the highways for three reasons:

1—For violation of motor vehicle laws.

2—Failure to satisfy within 15 days a final judgment in excess of $200 rendered for damages, personal injury or death arising out of a motor accident.

3—For two or more accidents causing damages totaling $200 or more within the 12 months preceding application for driver's license.

LIABILITY SET

A minimum financial responsibility of $5,000 for death or injury to one person, $10,000 for injury or death of two or more and $1,000 for property damage is required by the new law. This, in effect, is equivalent to the average automobile insurance policy.

The careful driver who has neither accidents nor motor code violations recorded against him has nothing to worry about except to keep his insurance and installments paid up.

But a single code violation makes it necessary under the law to provide a certificate of responsibility, which automatically increases the insurance premium 25 per cent. Fifteen per cent is for certification and 10 per cent for a minor violation.

PREMIUMS GRADED

The more serious the offense, the higher the premium. Additional premiums provided under the laws range as high as 65 per cent anually, and must be carried for three years.

Pennsylvania's law is the only one in 23 states and five Canadian provinces that has 'teeth.' Take the word of W. W. Mathews, director of the division of safety, Department of Revenue of Pennsylvania, who will administrate the new law:

"So far Pennsylvania is the only state adopting an automobile responsibility law which has the 'teeth' in it that this one does. For violators, the penalties are severe.

"If a prospective operator intentionally furnishes incorrect information, he will be ineligible to operate a motor vehicle in the state for two years and at the end of that period must furnish proof of financial responsibility.

"If his license has been suspended under provisions of the act and he is apprehended operating a vehicle, the penalty is imprisonment for not more than one year or a fine not exceeding $1,000 or both."

SAFEGUARD AIM

The intent of the law, according to insurance men, is to reduce the accident hazard and to safeguard the safe driver. There are features which provide harsh restrictions, they admit, but for the most part, they favor them.

Ray Tucker, Pittsburgh agent for the Travelers, said:

"Every car has 20 to 40 potential horses under the hood. if you put a wild jackass behind the wheel, you have 20 to 40 wild horses on a rampage and what we're trying to do is to get the jackass out."

The effect on insurance rates can only be surmised, but Tucker declared:

"We hope it will reduce rates ultimately because we're going to get a wider spread of risks and in the long run, the law will have removed from the roads the reckless and irresponsible driver."

FAMILIES PROTECTED

Some interesting possibilities are pointed out by those who have studied the law.

For the family man with insurance, it will be a protection. If his son, wife or daughter has an accident, all are protected by the same policy, which can be used as a certificate of responsibility when and if necessary.

Should a truck driver for a concern operating a fleet get into difficulties with his own car, he must provide a responsibility certificate before he can drive for an employer, and on the other hand, if he has an accident while employed, he must provide the certificate before he can operate even his own machine.

PEGGY RICH

RICH'S EX-WIFE SETTLES BALM

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—The breach of promise suit brought by Peggy Rich, divorced wife of the orchestra leader, against Jack De Ruyter, has been settled out of court for a "substantial sum of money," it is announced by her attorney.

Mrs. Rich had brought suit for $250,000. De Ruyter, scion of a socially prominent family, had declared that announcement of his engagement to Mrs. Rich, while the two were on a vaudeville tour, was a "publicity gag."

The attorney also announced he had received a release from Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, De Ruyter's aunt, for any possible claim she may bring against his client. He said Mrs. Campbell had at one time "practically supported" her nephew and Mrs. Rich when they failed to make a go of it in vaudeville.

KILLS FRIEND'S WIFE, SELF

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The slaying in a suburban Lyons beer tavern today of a young married woman was followed several hours later by the suicide of the man police identified as her killer.

The principals in the double tragedy were Mrs. Irene Hard, 24, of Lyons, and Wilfred Belanger, 51, identified by the former's husband, George Hard, as "my best friend."

Joseph Talafous, proprietor of the Camp Grill Tavern, said the couple returned to the place after taking Hard home and that as they sat drinking they began to quarrel.

Going to the booth, he said he saw Belanger draw a revolver at which the tavern keeper rushed to a telephone to call police. While he was putting a call through he said a shot was fired and he found Mrs. Hard lying dead on the floor and her companion gone.

POOR CHILDREN TO SEE FILMS

Through a one-man philanthropy, hundreds of children in the Hill District who otherwise would see no movies, will get their screen thrills on Christmas Day.

Thomas Daly, Negro contractor of 2813 Center avenue, will do his bit for the fourth successive year to provide cheer among children who haven't the means to attend a theater. He will present motion pictures in his home Sunday afternoon and Christmas afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Daly has his own projector and rents films for the performance. On Christmas night he will show films at the Coleman Home for Boys.

Last Christmas 750 children witnessed the performances. The only requirement, Daly said, is that they apply for their free tickets before the show opens.

MAIL VETERAN, ACQUITTED, TO RETIRE

Lyman S. Divers, 51, former superintendent of the Squirrel Hill Branch of the Pittsburgh Postoffice, acquitted yesterday in Federal Court of embezzlement of a letter containing $7.50, today said he would seek reinstatement and then retirement.

He was in charge of the Squirrel Hill Branch 15 years, when arrested July 27, having previously been attached to the East Liberty Branch Station. He has spent nearly 30 years in the postal service.

At the trial before Judge R. M. Gibson, at which Divers was accused of taking the money from a "decoy" letter, two former postmasters of Pittsburgh, James B. Anderson and George W. Gosser, testified.

Gosser was a character witness for the defendant. Anderson was called as a government witness to establish that Divers was in charge of the Squirrel Hill Branch at the time of the alleged offense.

When the jury's verdict was announced there was a slight demonstration by friends of Divers, but quickly stopped when the court rapped for order. As the jurors left the jury box they were thanked by Divers.

On the witness stand he admitted having had in his possession the "marked money" taken from the letter, but said he had taken it from a cash drawer in the office when he changed a $10 bill of his own.

NINE CHILDREN FLEE FIRE

Nine children, one of whom was confined to bed by illness, were forced from their home, at 511 East Lacock street, early today by fire believed to have been caused when a hot coal rolled from a stove onto a rug. The fire burned a hole through the floor causing an estimated loss of $50.

The fire was discovered by Harry Furguiele, who assisted his wife, Amelia, and their seven children, Joseph, 14; Mary, 13; Yolando, 10; Vincent, 9; Harry, 4; Rose, 3, and Anthony, 3 months.

Pleas for Yule '$50,000' Swamp First Lady

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been almost snowed under by an avalanche of letters requesting part of a mythical $50,000 fund she is supposed to have in charge for distribution at Christmas, she has revealed.

The situation arose through a newspaper story that two Detroit men, former newsboys, played Santa Claus every year in their native city.

These men invited Mrs Roosevelt to Detroit to preside at a Christmas dinner. Somehow or other the mythical $50,000 got into the story, with the result the First Lady has been deluged with requests for part of the money.

LEASE REFUSED FOR BILLBOARD

Declaring its policy was opposed to billboards on school property, the Board of Public Education's committee on finance and administration last night refused the General Outdoor Advertising Company a lease on the old Grant Street School property. The action was unanimous.

The committee consented to a request of the Board on Assessment and Revision of Taxes to use 80 public schools during January to receive personal property tax returns, provided the county pays for the extra janitor service, calculated at $216 a night.

James Bonar, superintendent of buildings, told the committee 255 additional men had been employed on 16 of the 17 projects being done under the CWA. The work includes grading and other improvements of school properties at a cost of nearly $75,000, Bonar said. Sixteen of the 17 improvements have been approved by the state CWA head, he said.

Jutland Admiral Becomes Clergyman

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Wadham Woods, who won the Distinguished Service Order in the battle of Jutland, has entered the clergy of the Church of England.

He was ordained by the bishop of London, made curate of St. Paul's Church in Whitechapel and is to become chaplain of the Sailors' Home in Whitechapel.

HIGHLAND PARK DROWNING DUE TO ILLNESS

Ill health was blamed today for the drowning of Mrs. Anna Gruber, 75-year-old widow, in a Highland Park reservoir yesterday.

At the home of her daughter, Miss Helen Gruber, 226 Leigh street, Edgewood, it was said last night that Mrs. Gruber's health had been failing since a nervous breakdown several months ago. Her body was taken out of the reservoir yesterday by a watchman who began searching after finding a hat afloat.

Mrs. Gruber left her daughter's home early Sunday, Miss Gruber said. When she failed to return yesterday, Miss Gruber notified L. J. O'Neill, a police captain, of Carnegie Steel Company, where she is employed as a nurse.

If Mrs. Gruber was the familiar figure around the Highland Park reservoir that a laborer there said she was, Miss Gruber was unaware of it. She said:

"If she went to the park often we knew nothing about it. We always tried to take her in an automobile wherever she wanted to go. Sometimes she would go out for the day, but she always came home again."

Mrs. Gruber leaves another daughter, Miss Johanna Gruber.

Juror Seeks O.K. to Vote Against His Conscience

The jury, trying a damage case against the Pittsburgh Railways Company, had been out for hours. Worn by argument, the members filed back into the courtroom and the foreman reported the disagreement to the court.

Judge W. H. McNaugher explained at great length the costliness of disagreements — time, money, etc. Suddenly he was interrupted by the foreman, who rose to his feet and inquired:

"Judge, would it be all right if I voted against my conscience?"

The jury was finally discharged some hours later, still disagreeing.

TAX PROPOSAL HELD PERIL TO U. S. TRADE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Two proposals by which the House Ways and Means Committee hopes to raise 30 million dollars annually in income taxes were vigorously criticized today by representatives of the Roosevelt administration and American business enterprises.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson joined with the International Chamber of Commerce in opposing the proposal whereby American concerns operating in foreign countries should not be allowed credit for tax payments abroad against income levies here. The committee estimates it would increase federal revenue 10 million dollars annually by banning such tax credits.

Domestic concerns were placed on record against the proposed abolition of consolidated income tax returns by which the committee hopes to raise 20 million dollars additional taxes a year.

Citing the statement the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., made to the committee in opposittion to foreign tax credit elimination, Dickinson and Mitchell B. Carroll, of New York, representing the American secttion of the International Chamber of Commerce, predicted the American export trade would be injured.

Dickinson said that the committee proposed to reverse the policy of the government against double taxation adopted in 1918.

George P. P. Bonnell, of Pittsburgh, tax consultant for the Armstrong Cork Corporation of Pennsylvania, predicted that if the consolidated returns for corporations are abolished, the Treasury would not receive the 20 million dollars estimated by the committee but that it would actually lose money.

CLEANERS WAIT PRICE CUTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—New price schedules for dry cleaning throughout the United States were withheld again yesterday at NRA, but probably will be made public today, to become effective December 22.

Although a basis for revision downward in many parts of the country had been decided upon, price schedules were not finished. Just how much reduction in the prices was being made officials would not say.

It was indicated that in some cities the original price structure would be left intact and all signs pointed against a differential for cash and carry cleaners, who in large numbers violated the first list and who complained that having to charge the same as cleaners with delivery service would put them out of business.

FUGITIVE FLEES AS SHOTS FLY

WARSAW, Ind., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Merritt Longbrake, "Lone Wolf" fugitive bank robber suspect, who who escaped from the Bellefontaine (O.) Jail in July, was hunted through this part of Indiana today following an unsuccessful attempt by two state policemen to capture him at his farm south of Warsaw.

Longbrake exchanged shots with the officers last night as he fled in an automobile with his 17-year-old daughter. Trace of the fugitive was lost at Burket. Officers here said he confessed to the $2,900 robbery of a Hicksville (O.) bank, April 18, and the $700 $700 robbery of a Huntsville (O.) bank in July 11, 1932.

Ohio Convict Sends Greeting to Police

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—It was about five years ago that Detectives George Ruder and Ray Archer arrested Johnny Myers, now No. 64109 in Ohio Penitentiary. Now Johnny sends them this Christmas greeting:

"If all the boys in here shared my thoughts and plans for the future you both would be looking for jobs. Luck, all good, and the best of Christmas."

Merchants Band To Seek Defeat Of Tugwell Bill

The second meeting here of the "Minute Men," an organization gaining momentum throughout the country to fight against the passage of the Tugwell Bill, soon slated for Congressional action, was held last night by a group of Pittsburgh merchants in the Keystone Club.

The branch formed a committee, headed by George Yohe, to enlist the aid of local and national drug associations in the fight againts the bill, which they describe as "drastic and bureaucratic" legislation.

The bill, they said, would put under government control cosmetics, medicines and all package foods. It would control the manufacturing and labeling and all advertising, they charged, and cut advertising lineage 75 per cent.

The local members were urged to bring pressure upon Representatives and Senators from this district to kill the bill. Martin Kovacs, temporary secretary of the organization, presided.

POSTAL INCOME GAINS HERE

Receipts of the Pittsburgh postoffice for the first 15 days in December were $343,275, an increase of 13.3 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, when they totaled $302,180. The increased volume of business was shown in a report made to Washington by Postmaster William M. Turner.

Postmaster Turner has urged that Christmas packages be mailed as early as possible to prevent congestion the end of the week. He is using all available regular and extra employes to have the Christmas deliveries made before the holiday.

Postmaster Turner also called attention to the new postage rate of two cents an ounce on first class mail deposited for mailing in the Pittsburgh postal district addressed to any of the localities which are part of the district. To all points outside the Pittsburgh postal district the rate on first class mail is three cents an ounce.

CRISS UPHOLDS DUAL PENSION

In an opinion given the Board of Public Education committee on finance and administration, N. R. Criss, its solicitor, held the board was legally bound to continue paying a pension to Miss Catherine Anderson, former Bellefield school teacher, although she is also receiving one from the state.

Miss Anderson is one of the original pensioners of the school board by the old law under which each school district maintained an individual pension system. Following her retirement after 20 years in the Pittsburgh schools, Miss Anderson took a position as a teacher in the Penn Township schools.

After serving the 250 school months required under the state teachers' pension law, Miss Anderson cited her experience in the Pittsburgh schools to obtain a state pension from the state, Criss asserted, and thus is receiving two pensions for the same service.

RODGERS HEADS SAFETY GROUP

William B. Rodgers, of the McCrady-Rodgers Company, yesterday was elected president of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council at the annual meeting in the Chamber of Commerce. Others elected were:

A. Lyle Linderman, treasurer; Frank Wilbur Main, auditor; P. H. McCance, chairman of the budget committee; C. E. Ralston, vice president in charge of industrial safety; L. W. McIntyre, vice president in charge of public safety; R. M. Sherrard, vice president in charge of school safety; D. W. Wait, vice president in charge of home safety; Francis Feehan, vice president in charge of mine safety, and Grafton Duvall, vice president in charge of publicity.

G. E. Clarkson was re-elected manager.

IDLE WON'T GET OLD JOBS BACK, SAYS ICKES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Scant prospects for unemployed workers to regain their old jobs were seen in Secretary Ickes' annual report today to President Roosevelt.

But a pronounced movement back to the farm, where food can be obtained, at least in part, from the soil, was said to be taking care of some workers. The government, the report recalled, is aiding urban families to become self-sustaining on homesteads in small rural communities.

"A fact of large significance for industrial recovery programs in the present situation is that even trained workers, who have been displaced or let out in the period of recession, can in large proportion of instances never be taken back on the payrolls of industry at their old jobs, either during or following the period of resumption."

For industrial recovery, the report explained, their training and experience will have become misfit as a result of technological advance.

More economical processes calling for new trade skills are being introduced, however, said the report, pointing to vocational training as a means of industrial recovery. It said:

"For millions of those now unemployed, traditional trade skill and occupational experience, acquired in the predepression period, will very generally have gone into the discard as part of the price society must pay for resumption of activities at all under the intensified competitive pressure for economy which always characterizes a period of recovery.

"Industrial recovery and elimination of unemployment will accordingly be not simply a placement procedure of returning labor to jobs for which they are fitted, but rather a training procedure of preparing labor for the new jobs that have become available."

Increasing economic insecurity of the adult worker and abandonment of the youth of the nation to idleness and aimless drifting "or at best to misfit educational discipline" were seen as "the more serious problems emerging in our present economic order."

Illness After Auto Injury Proves Fatal

Mrs. Jennie Estep, 64, of Murraysville, died last night in Columbia Hospital from a heart ailment superinduced by injuries suffered Wednesday when two automobiles collided on the William Penn highway, Wilkins Township, according to the Coroner's report.

G. E. Fenwick, 53, of 518 Mission street, was injured when struck by a motorcycle in Bigelow boulevard near Sixth avenue, last night. He was taken to Allegheny General Hospital.

'Psychology Club' Promoter Fined

Charged with operating without a city permit, Horace Sullivan, 45, of Dormont, was fined $25 or 30 days in jail by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court yesterday in connection with an advertisement for investors in what city detectives described as "psychology clubs."

Mary Brown, 1337 Oak Glen street, testified Sullivan told her he planned to form "psychology clubs" from which she would realize about $10,000 if she invested $300. There was no evidence Sullivan had obtained any money for his project.

DEATH DELAYS THREAT TRIAL

The trial of E. E. Wells, of Indiana, Pa., in Federal Court charged with an attempt to extort $3,500 from his former employer, Vernon F. Taylor, oil and gas operator, has been delayed by the death of Attorney Harry W. Earhart, of Indiana, the government's chief witness. Earhart was killed December 9 in a hunting accident. The trial was to open yesterday.

Wells, according to the charges, threatened to inform the Internal Revenue Bureau that Taylor had evaded payment of income tax for the years 1917 to 1921. Taylor reported the alleged threat to the revenue authorities.

PENSION DEBATE HEARD BY 3 JUDGES

Argument was heard yesterday on the demurrer filed by the majority commissioners of Allegheny County to a mandamus proceeding to compel them to pay $75,000 into the County Retirement fund.

Attorney A. W. Powell, representing the fund, told Judges Ambrose B. Reid, William H. McNaugher and Samuel H. Gardner, who sat en banc, that the Commissioners paid money into the fund since 1915 but after the 1932 act took control from the board's hands, it refused payments.

Powell called attention to the audit being made by the Commissioners, adding:

"They have paid out $145,000 for an audit not provided for by law. As far as this fund is concerned, the County Commissioners are bound by the law and the acts of their predecessors."

Commissioners C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr oppose the pension payment, stating the fund is insolvent.

Attorney John H. Lauer, representing the Commissioners, said the Commissioners were simply using their rightful discretionary powers.

Innocent Convict Freed; Served Seven Years

AUBURN, N. Y., Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Prison gates were to swing open today for Edward Larkman, of Buffalo, after a seven-year term served for a murder he didn't commit.

Larkman was convicted in Erie County in 1926 of the slaying of a paymaster in a holdup. He was sentenced to death, but the penalty was commuted to life imprisonment by the then Gov. Alfred E. Smith. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman pardoned Larkman chiefly on the basis of a confession, made in 1929, by Anthony Kalkiewicz, that he was guilty of the murder.

FILM DIRECTOR SUED FOR BALM

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Victor L. Fleming, prominent film director, was accused in a $150,000 suit today of alienating the affections of Mrs. Paul A. Lockwood, wife of a studio cameraman.

The suit charged the director abandoned Mrs. Lockwood, daughter of Carter De Haven, actor, after a trip to San Francisco October 4, and Mrs. Lockwood subsequently was placed in a sanatorium for mental treatment.

The action was filed yesterday, only a day after disclosure of Fleming's secret marriage of last September 26 to Lucille Rosson, Beverly Hills society girl.

Two Service Fliers Killed in Crash

WARRENTON, Mo., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Capt. Wilton M. Briney and Lieut. Graham St. John, both of Kansas City, were killed nine miles south of High Hill, Mo., last night when their training plane crashed.

MERCY KILLER'S JOB TOO LATE

International News Service.

WALLINGTON, N. J., Dec. 19.—An ironic epilogue to the "mercy slaying" of Mrs. Anna Dolack was locked today in the files of police headquarters here.

It was a small white card, stating tersely that the Civil Works Administration had approved the application for emergency employment of George Dolack, 20.

But five hours before the card was received at police headquarters, George had walked into the poverty-stricken home where he lived with his mother and a sister, raised a $5 rifle and fired a bullet into the heart of his aged mother, suffering for years from asthma. A minute later, he sent a bullet crashing into his own head, to die several hours later in a hospital.

Agonized by his mother's years of want and pain, torn by his inability to find work and support her, George did "what God would want" him to do, he told police before he died.

TEACHERS DENY BUYING JOBS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—School teachers, testifying at a hearing on ouster proceedings against four school directors of Pringle Borough, denied they paid anything for their positions.

Their testimony came last night, a few hours after Mrs. Catherine French and her son told of talking with A. P. Cope, county superintendent of schools and his assistant, P. T. Kane, about payment to Frank Handley, one of the defendants, for a teaching job for the son.

Kane denied the charges.

White House Visit Terrifies Hero Aviator

ST. PAUL, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The hazards of flying cannot frighten Mal Freeburg, Northwestern Airways pilot, but meeting the President of the United States "nearly scared him to death," he said.

Last week Freeburg went to Washington, where President Roosevelt presented to him a medal for "distinguished service as an air mail pilot." The medal was awarded for his heroism in bringing to a safe landing his tri-motored plane carrying mail and eight passengers after dislodging and dropping into the Mississippi River a motor that had loosened itself. The incident occurred in April, 1932, on a Chicago-Twin Cities flight.

Oil City Lawyer Commits Suicide

OIL CITY, Pa., Dec. 19.—Louis J. Roess, 63, widely-known Venango County attorney, shot himself through the heart with a shotgun at his home yesterday, his birthday. He had just returned from a Battle Creek sanitarium where he was undergoing treatment for a nervous breakdown.

CHURCH PLANS BOAR FETE

FAIRMONT, W. Va. Dec. 19.—(A.P.)—Something unusual in West Virginia—celebration of the ancient English custom, the boar's head dinner will take place in Christ Episopal Church Parish Hall here Thursday night. The invitation list is limited to 250 persons and applications for reservations have been sent from all parts of the state to the Rev. C. W. Brickman, rector.

The feast will be served in the feudal setting of a tudor feasting hall. Spluttering tapers will lend an Elizabethen touch to the scene.

The ceremony of the dinner will follow the tradition of many centuries as celebrated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and Queen's College, Oxford, England.

A feature will be lighting of a great candle, which will burn throughout the ceremonies. A boys' and adult choir of 60 voices will sing.

Paris Puts Artists On Jobless Dole

PARIS, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—The artist, who by tradition comes to Paris to starve in a Latin quarter garret, henceforth will have difficulty doing this. At least, there will be no excuse for it.

Girl Theft Suspect Keeps Word; Jailed

The word of a young woman accused of larceny was as good as her bond, so she turned up in Central Police Court to be held for court.

City detectives apprehended Roberta Haynes, 23, of 111 Fourth street, Freeport, Saturday, and took merchandise from her which they charged was stolen from Pittsburgh stores. Because she had a small child with her, they did not arrest her, but told her to be in police court this morning. The girl appeared Magistrate Leo Rothenberg ordered her held.

Review Will Give Children's Party

Schenley Review of the Woman's Benefit Association will give a party for children of the junior branch at Boyd's Hall, 537 Penn avenue, at 2 p. m., December 28. The program will be in charge of Mrs. Ora F. Grant, junior supervisor.

SALES TAX AIDS MISSISSIPPI

Universal Service.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 19.—The sales tax idea, originally adopted by the state of Mississippi and looked upon with favor by other states, continues to fill the coffers of the Treasury Department.

The latest figures available today denote the magnitude of the tax and indicate, also, that business is on the upgrade.

For the month of September receipts were 36.6 per cent higher than for the same month last year, according to the Mississippi Business Index, issued by Alf H. Stone, chairman of the state tax commission.

Total sales for the period from January 1 to September 30 amounted to $176,923,322. The food group of taxes amounted to $18,391,824, while the automobile group, including accessories and automobiles, amounted to $19,364,522.

Theodore A. Seidle Gets Teacher Post

Theodore A. Seidle, director of the teacher placement bureau of the University of Pittsburgh, was elected a member of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Association of Appointment Bureaus and Teacher Placement Services in Accredited Colleges and Universities. The election was at a meeting of the State Department of Public Education. The bureau has been created in an effort to co-ordinate the services of the bureaus already existing at various schools.

PERFECT GIFTS—
CAMELS AND PRINCE ALBERT
—IN GAY XMAS PACKAGES

CAMELS... made from finer, more expensive tobaccos

Recognized everywhere as being made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand, Camels naturally suggest themselves as the gift for any smoker. Camels never get on the nerves or tire the taste. The smoker to whom you give Camels will appreciate the mildness and satisfying flavor of those costlier tobaccos. So to give pleasure, give Camels—now on display in gay Christmas packages.

PRINCE ALBERT—THE NATIONAL JOY SMOKE

Among men who smoke pipes or "roll their own," Prince Albert smoking tobacco is known as "the national joy smoke." A special process takes out every hint of harshness or "bite"—leaves P. A. cool, slow-burning and mellow. No wonder that more men smoke Prince Albert than any other brand. The one-pound glass humidors and one-pound tins are suitably packaged for the Christmas season.

RACER AFLAME, WIFE FAINTS AT TRACK

As part of the campaign to diminish death and danger on automobile speedways and to make race promoters liable for the care of dependents of those killed on the tracks, there is herewith presented a series of three articles written for the Hearst newspapers by Mrs. Cliff Bergere, wife of one of the best known drivers in the country. This is the second article wherein Mrs. Bergere tells an impressive, dramatic story of what it means to be the wife of a racing driver.

By MRS. CLIFF BERGERE
Written for Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—There is a kiss that never touched my lips that shall live in my memory forever.

I was in the grandstand at Salem, N. H., for a Fourth of July race in which Cliff was entered. The wife of a racing driver has eyes for only one car, that in which her husband is crouched.

Round and round he sped; lap after lap gaining on the field. I would look at the score board and sigh with relief as the end of the race grew nearer.

I had just told myself, after he had driven 118 laps, that he had the "feel" of the track and would probable increase his speed to go into the lead when it happened.

I jumped to my feet in terror as I saw his car hit a hole in the track, bounce and come down on all four wheels. I could see, however, that he had lost control. He had been averaging 134 miles an hour and a spin at that speed means a crackup.

FAINTED at CRACKUP

I screamed:

"There goes my baby! There goes my baby!"

The car spun slowly first to the top of the track and then to the dirt at the lower edge. He hit it at a 45 degree angle and I saw daylight between the back of the seat and the wheel.

I fainted.

When I recovered consciousness someone was saying:

"He's all right, Mrs. Bergere, he's all right."

I looked, and there was Cliff walking down the track from his wrecked car.

His eyes searched the grandstand until he saw me.

Then, slowly and deliberately, with the eyes of the crowd focused on him, he lifted his fingers to his lips and threw me a kiss.

DIVES FOR BASEMENT!'

Cliff had escaped death that day by "diving for the basement," as the drivers say. When he realized he had lost control he set his front wheels straight and ducked under the cowl.

When Cliff first asked me to marry him I refused. I wanted what most women want, safety and a calm harbor. I certainly could not see that in the cards as the wife of a gambler, for that is what a racing driver really is. He gambles not only his life but almost always his last dollar on the outcome of a race.

Speed! Speed! More speed! That irresistable urge in the brain and soul of every driver marred our marriage, January 7, 1925. I had hoped for a church wedding, with a gown and flowers and all the ceremony that thrills a bride.

HONEYMOON IN JAIL

Instead—

Well, there was a race New Year's Day at Santa Ana. On the way to the track we were arrested for driving 52 miles an hour. Cliff simply could not drive moderately. A week later he was sentenced to serve 10 days in jail.

Cliff said:

"Wouldn't feel so bad if we were married, but I know if I am away from you for 10 days, you will change your mind."

We were married that afternoon by Judge K. E. Morrison, who had pronounced sentence on Cliff. And our best man was the officer who had arrested him, Henry Warner! We even had to borrow the wedding ring! And Cliff spent the first 10 days of our married life—our honeymoon—in jail!

Drivers are so possessed by the demon speed that sometimes they defy death even before a race starts by entering or consenting to drive a car they know is unsafe.

I recall a race at Bakersfield. The prize money was small, only $200 for first place. Cliff was to drive an old Frontinac for a percentage of what he might win. The car had no gasoline cut-off and Cliff tried to get the owner to install one. He said he wouldn't care to be in it if it caught fire as he had to be put into the driver's seat with a shoehorn. But, the owner refused and did Cliff refuse to drive? He did not!

RACING CAR AFLAME

I was seated high up in the grandstand when Cliff's car burst in flames as he entered the home stretch. Into my mind flashed the thought "no shutoff." I ran down to the guarded gate leading out on the track.

Firefighting apparatus had been sent out to meet Cliff as he came around again. I tried to get into the ambulance but the gate guard held me back.

I beat him with my fists, sobbing:

"No gas shutoff. He can't get out. Let me in. Let me in."

I know now that I didn't belong out on the track and could have done no good, but there was my husband in a flame-swept car and no way of stopping the fire from reaching the gasoline tank.

I was so hysterical and frightened that I forgot to say the little, quick, prayer that is always on the lips of the wives of drivers.

WIDOWS IN WAITING

When the car came back in the straightaway Cliff was sitting up on the tank, his legs drawn up. The flames were darting about the steering wheel and reaching out like a fiery comet behind him. Then he managed to bring the car to a stop and jump to safety.

Out of those lapping flames he walked straight to me, as cool as if nothing had happened, though his gloves and the golf stockings he had worn were burned off his hands and legs.

It took me days to recover from the horror of that experience.

CROSS STITCH MOTIFS — PATTERN 608

Cross-Stitch Is Quickly Done

These small cross-stitch motifs, ranging in size from 2¼x6½ to 1¼x2½ inches, are just the thing to make some inexpensive gift distinctive. These gifts can be so small that they can easily be inserted in an envelope. Each motif takes but a few minutes to do and, being individual and colorful, can give character to an article that is bought already finished. The towel, handkerchief case, sachet and book-mark shown take but a short time and little material to make.

Pattern 608 comes to you with a transfer pattern of one bird motif 2¼x6½ inches, two each of the wreath, flower spray and basket, one and one reverse of the rose and elephant and one scottie; a color key and complete directions for making the articles shown.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Emergency Airport Under Way in Ohio

TORONTO, O., Dec. 18.—Construction of a new airport that, officials said, will serve as an emergency landing field when planes encounter bad weather near Pittsburgh was begun here today. The work is being done as a civil works project. Employment was provided 230 men.

The port will be on or near regular air routes west of Pittsburgh, 30 miles west of that city.

JUNIOR PATROL

The spirit of Christmas is in the air—Everywhere you go you see people getting ready for the year's biggest holiday. In many vacant yards and stores this week you will see beautiful Christmas trees for sale. In every store there are gifts to buy. And people will decorate their windows with holly, candles, and scarlet poinsettas.

Most of the fun at Christmas comes because people give to others. No fooling, giving is more fun than getting, fellows! Just wrapping up the presents in pretty papers and ribbons—decorated with seals and Yuletide stickers is a party. Old Santa Claus, that marvelous fellow who gets around the world in a single night, has many helpers.

Now we have this dandy letter from President Luella Jones, of Box 142, Cecia, Pa. She writes:

"There are 15 of us that want to be a member of the Junior Patrol Club. We have meetings twice a week and we decided that we should join right with your club and be workers for you."

"We read all the letters and stories that are in the paper. We enjoy this sort of fun and we all co-operate with each other. Our club has been organized a week ago Saturday. We sell candy and have raffles and have dues. Our dues are one cent a week. We have a friend, Mrs. Porigneaux, who made a pair of dollies for our raffle, and we received one dollar for it. We now have $2.27 in our treasury. We think that we will use our money to help others and to have little parties. We are going to have a Christmas tree free of charge."

And she sends us a list of members from which to select a captain and lieutenant for her club. A captain or a lieutenant is always elected by a club itself, Luella. Since you have already been elected president, and since a president is almost the same as a captain, why don't you pass a law making you president and captain both the same? And the same wtih other officers who can be lieutenants.

You must have a wonderful club. And we are mighty happy to hear that you have so many fine plans for helping others. Please send us all the news about your club just as soon as you can, and how people like your Christmas play and everything. Write us just what you think about things—we would like to have your club contribute to the Junior Patrol Mail Box.

NEW SLOGAN—BAKE EARLY FOR CHRISTMAS

Many Delicacies Can Be Prepared In Advance

All month we've been reading signs "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early". Wouldn't it be equally sensible, queries Prudence Penny, to do your Christmas Baking Early?

Of course there are any number of things that can't be prepared until Christmas Day, but there are a number of others that you can get out of the way now. Cookies, candies, certain cakes can all be made now and put away for future use.

Included in today's prize recipe is Mrs. Loury's favorite way of making fudge which is a particularly good one. Why not have a batch of such delicious fudge on hand to help along the holiday spirit? For a decorative, as well as an edible touch, at next Monday's dinner, make enough Christmas candy baskets to put one at each person's place. The children, especially, will love them.

Do your part in the contest by sending in your recipes to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, and you may receive either the $5 prize or one of the ten $1 prizes awarded daily. No recipes will be returned.

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. JULIA M. HOFMAN,
228 S. Pacific avenue.
ENGLISH TRIFLE.

Sponge cake.
One and one-half cups soft custard.
One-half cup sweet sherry flavoring.
One-half cup currant jelly.

Make custard as follows and place in refrigerator to chill.
One pint milk.
Four eggs.
Pinch of salt.

Heat milk and sugar in top of double boiler. Add salt to eggs and beat well. Add to milk and allow to cook for five minutes. Remove from fire and cool before placing in refrigerator. Cut sponge cake to fit pan. Cover sponge cake with nuts. Spread currant jelly over top. Add soft custard. Garnish with whip cream. Place in refrigerator to chill until ready to serve. Ten servings.

Ten $1 Recipes

MRS. M. BRECHBILL,
157 Market street, Leechburg.
ROAST LEG OF VENISON.

Leg of venison.
Fat salt pork.
Salt and pepper.
Flour.

Lard the lean side of the leg with strips of the pork, rub oil over the meat and dredge with salt, pepper and flour. Place it in a very hot oven (450° Fahr.). Add boiling water to cover the bottom of the pan. Baste the venison well every 15 minutes, until the meat is done, renewing the water in the pan as often as necessary. Serve with a gravy made from the juices in the bottom of the pan. Always serve a tart jelly like current jelly or wild grape or plum jelly with venison.

MRS. G. C. LOURY,
230 West Penn street, Butler.
FUDGE

Melt in sauce pan:
Two large tablespoons butter.
Two squares unsweetened chocolate.
When entirely melted add
Two cups sugar.
One-half cup milk.

Stir thoroughly while bringing to a boil. Add a pinch of salt and pour carefully into a clean pan. Continue boiling over a very slow fire and in about two minutes begin to test by removing a very little with a teaspoon and trying in a half cup of cold water, but not ice water. When it forms a soft ball, remove from fire, add half teaspoon vanilla. Pour onto marble slab and beat, scooping it back from the edges with spatula and pancake turner. When nearly firm, add two tablespoons chopped nuts. If it starts to get firm before it is cold add small spoon of butter. Pile onto a buttered plate.

M. LOUISE TAYLOR,
5600 Howe street.
CHICKEN SUPREME SANDWICHES

Put one-third cup chicken, two olives, one-fourth green pepper and one hard cooked egg through food chopper; add one and one-half teaspoon chili sauce, two teaspoons mayonnaise dressing and table sauce to season. Mix well and use as filling for toasted sandwiches.

MRS. C. W. WICHTERMAN
6 Meta street, Mt. Washington
SOUTHERN RICE
(substitute for potatoes)

Two cups rice.
Two quarts water.
One tablespoon salt, added to water.
Three slices of bacon, cut fine.
One small onion, cut fine.
One small can tomatoes.
One heaping tablespoon flour.

When water is boiling, add rice and cook until done, put bacon in frying pan, and fry until nearly crisp, then add onion and fry a few minutes longer, stir in flour, and add tomatoes, and enough water to make gravy right consistency. Add salt and pepper to suit taste. Drain rice when done and serve gravy over rice. The water that rice is cooked in can be used in gravy.

MRS. E. H. STEVENS,
1124 Stanton street, Monongahela.
CHRISTMAS CANDY BASKETS

One-half cup water.
A pinch of cream of tartar and stir together. Boil until it cracks when dropped into cold water. Do not stir. Pour it out on a buttered slab and gradually work it into a ball by folding the edges into the center. When cool enough to handle add one-fourth teaspoon coloring and one-half teaspoon flavoring extract. Then pull and form into baskets, buttering hands occasionally while pulling. The following extracts and colors go well together, wintergreen extracts; pink color, lemon extract; yellow color, spearmint extract; green color and peppermint use no extract.

For children's parties the baskets make a delightful decoration or gift, especially as they are good to eat as well as to look at.

MRS. M. HUFF,
Box 25, Tarentum.
CHILDREN'S VEGETABLE DESSERT-SALAD

One package lemon or pineapple gelatin.
One cup boiling water.
One cup cold water.
Two tender carrots (finely grated).
Three crisp sticks celery (diced very fine).
One-fourth cup English walnuts (cut fine).

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water, add cold water, half fill six individual molds, set aside until firm. Mix vegetables and nuts with balance of gelatin, chilled but not firm. Add this to firm gelatin in molds. Serve when firm all over. Children relish vegetables prepared in this manner when they will not eat them cooked—so like a dessert to them. For adults unmold on lettuce. Serve with mayonnaise or any preferred dressing. Very nice for persons on diet due to stomach trouble who are permitted carrots and celery, and for very small children likewise omit nuts. For those on reducing diet omit nuts and dressing.

MRS. WILLIAM GRIERSON
R. D. 2, Irwin.
CORN SYRUP

Shell 15 or 18 corn cobs.
Six quarts of water.

Boil two or three hours. Strain liquid. Add three quarts of corn sugar and boil until it begins to syrup. Add small can of corn syrup to prevent it becoming crystalized. This will make six gallons of the very best corn syrup.

MRS. E. ERNST,
"ONION PIE," in German called "ZWIEBELKUCHEN" RECIPE.

Slice about 12 medium sized onions and steam them with drippings of butter, until tender; add pepper and salt to taste. Beat three or four eggs with little milk and pour over onions. Pie crust not to be too rich, one and one-half cups flour, one-half cup lard mixed with little water and rolled out. After the steamed onions, egg-covered, are placed upon the pie-crust, scraps of bacon may be placed over top if liked. This pie tastes best when eaten while warm. Time for baking about 30 minutes.

MRS. AGNES PAUTON,
KOSHER CORNED BEEF

Get a cut of brisket beef (round or chuck will do) about 5 or 6 pounds and put it into a gallon crock and cover with a brine made as follows: Salt-peter the size of a hickory nut, half-cup of brown sugar, pinch of ground cloves, a couple of bay leaves, two or three allspice, dash of red pepper, two cloves of garlic, and salt enough to make a strong brine and enough water to cover the meat (about two quarts). Let stand 10 or 12 days. After taking meat from the brine boil until very tender. Beef tongue can be pickled the same way. This amount sufficient for three tongues.

MRS. HULDA POLSON,
400 Taylor street, Bloomfield
SPRITS COOKIES

Cream one-half pound butter, two-thirds cup sugar, yolks of three eggs, four grated bitter almonds, two and one-half measuring cups of flour. Bake in a hot oven. Ateco cookie presser is to be used.

Sargasso Sea Thriller On Radio

From the after cabin of the schooner, "Seth Parker," in the port of Providence, tonight, comes a drama of the sea—the much maligned but mythical Sargasso Sea, where ships have been believed to have become befouled in a vast mass of floating seaweed.

The drama, written by Phillips Lord, master of the "Seth Parker," spins a fantastic yarn of a sailor rescued from the horrors of that sea of missing ships. It is heard over WCAE at 10 o'clock.

* * *

FANTASY

Edgar A. Guest has written a Christmas fantasy especially for broadcasting, to be presented with original music by Carlton Colby over NBC-KDKA tonight at 9.

* * *

The haunting refrain of "Smoke Rings," played by Glen Gray's Orchestra, introduces another caravan program over WJAS at 10, featuring Irene Taylor and the Do Re Mi Girls.

* * *

The Philadelphia Studio Orchestra plays a 15-minute program of Humperdinck and Resnicek compositions at 9, over CBS-WJAS, featuring especially the Overture to "Hansel and Gretel."

* * *

FIESTA

A pre-view of "Fiesta," new Princeton Triangle Club show, is scheduled over an NBC-WCAE network this afternoon at 5.

* * *

Confederate soldiers, for the first time, pledge allegiance to the nation's President in a broadcast scheduled over NBC-WCAE at 4:15 this afternoon.

* * *

Jesse L. Lasky, one-time reporter, gold prospector, Hawaiian bandsman, and now a great producer of motion pictures, is interviewed over WJAS at 9:30, during the California Melodies program.

* * *

FRIGHT

Try not to snicker at Spencer Dean as a great detective in this evening's "Bluebeard Room," NBC-KDKA Crime Clues thriller, at 8.

* * *

Today's News Broadcasts

Louis L. Kaufmann, Globe Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, broadcasts the day's news over WCAE and WJAS at 12:15, 2:15 and 6:30 p. m.

George Seibel, literary and dramatic critic of the Sun-Telegraph, whose network broadcast from New York Sunday morning has been hailed in broadcasting circles as one of the best and most amusing stage criticisms ever heard, is still in the East, and will not give his usual Tuesday evening review over WCAE this week.

Mutiny on 'Show Boat;' Don Voorhees Quits

By AIRCASTER

Last Thursday's "Show Boat" presented, all unknown to the laity, a new and somewhat startling device.

The agency that builds the Show Boat shows injected into it some music from "The Student Prince"—rousing, rollicking drinking songs — accompanied by the banging of steins on tables.

And the audience, to a man, applauded vigorously. But that's not all, by any means.

Nobody, not even Don Voorhees, the musical director of Cap'n Henry's theatrical barge, was let in on the secret that the light operatic addition to the show was thrown in as a special audition for another sponsor.

* * *

DON QUITS

But the little subterfuge, coupled with other after-rehearsal tampering with the "Show Boat" music roused Don Voorhees' ire. He believed, like other orchestra gents, that an audition should be plainly tagged as such.

That's why Don has quit the Show Boat broadcast cold, though he may have to stay with it two weeks longer by the terms of a two-week notice clause in his contract.

* * *

NETWORTHY

A local music critic, Harvey Van Winkle, has just announced in his column the discovery of a singer in Pittsburgh.

Howard completes a full year on the air this week.

* * *

Between radio programs Ernie Holst is rehearsing his Holsters in a group of Christmas Carols. You'll hear them over KDKA some time this week if Ernie succeeds in sweetening one of the tenors.

* * *

MAE WEST

The portals of the radio have been thrown open once again to that gay lady, Mae West.

Originally, it had been the intention of the sponsor who will inaugurate an NBC series January 7, at 10:30 p. m. with Katharine Hepburn, to feature Miss West throughout 26 weeks, but there arose the question whether the Westian material would survive that length of time.

That and other difficulties decided the sponsor to waive his option on the star of "I'm No Angel" and to invite other guests from the cinema at intervals.

* * *

RECONSIDERS

But the sponsor has reconsidered. Difficulties have been swept away.

Mae West is still good box-office. She's to appear intermittently on the series, after it has been properly launched.

But Miss West won't do monologue. She'll merely re-enact scenes from her various plays, and the scenes will be cannily chosen so that even South Kansas will have nothing to fear.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Who says there is no Santa Claus? Well, I'll tell you this. I'll bet that you won't say that after tomorrow. At 12:15 we'll have the answer for you.

Uriah W. Tinker, who has been the Syria Santa Claus representative for many years and knows a lot about Santa Claus' business, will be at the microphones, and if anybody knows Santa Claus and what he does any better than Mr. Tinker, it must be Santa himself.

You mothers and fathers, will you have the children tune in at 12:15, and don't forget to listen yourselves?

E. E. Sullivan, West View; Mary Louise Hart, Braddock; Mrs. West, North Side, all have toys for the Toy Mission to distribute to children who otherwise might not have any Christmas.

If there are any others who have toys for Christmas distribution get in touch with the Toy Mission at 100 Wood street. The telephone number is Court 7183. The letters from Globe Trotters who have asked for toys will be turned over to them.

Mrs. Edward Moore, Hober avenue, McKees Rocks, who read in a recent issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph about the rare "Crucifixion Flower" advises that she has one in her home. It now is in bloom for the first time in three years.

Mrs. Miller, Lawrenceville—According to the latest government census (1930) the population of Pittsburgh is 679,000 and that of Pennsylvania is 9,638,000.

That problem from the State Liquor Control Job test we gave over the radio was, if A and B could finish a piece of work in 10 days, and A could do it alone in 15 days, then if A and B worked together for four days, how long would it take B to finish the job alone?

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Not so long ago it was as iconoclastic for a girl of a social registerite family to go to college as it was several years ago for her older sister to go to work.

Now each year we have a small group of college-going girls who hurry home Christmas vacation to cram their debut and all their debutante career into a fortnight. And no one looks askance at these college-bred debs, although many of their more frivolous sisters do wonder why they give up almost a whole season of dancing and dining and teaing.

But hardly anyone regards these student-debs as confirmed blue stockings or spinsters-to-be. And for a few families it has become as much a tradition for daughter to go to the same college as her mother, or for son to go to father's alma mater.

Elizabeth Laufman Today's College-Deb

Today we had the first of these college-deb coming-out parties. Elizabeth Laufman, daughter of the junior Wilmer B. Laufmans, of picturesque Undercliff road, was presented to society today at a luncheon her mother gave in the Twentieth Century Club.

Elizabeth chose a wine-red velvet dress for her debut gown. It had a high-necked yoke of fish-colored faille which extended to form the top of her full sleeves, which ended at the elbow. Her small hat was of the same velvet. And she carried pink bouvardi. Her mother was in black crepe with a matching hat and chose gardenias instead of the usual orchids.

Jane Kennedy Makes Bow Tomorrow

Tomorrow another of our college girls will be presented—Jane Kennedy, the Joseph W. Kennedy's Vassar daughter. Mrs. Kennedy will give a luncheon in her home. And Thursday Smith student Barbara Peirce, daughter of the C. L. Peirces, will make her bow to the social world at a tea her mother will give in the family home.

After the luncheon, debs will rush home to rest perhaps for half an hour or so, then get ready for a big night—for tonight the William B. Trainers will give a dinner in their home for Althea Robinson, who was presented in June, and tonight the social service committee of Allegheny General Hospital is giving a ball for the benefit of the hospital in the William Penn's Chatterbox.

At this brilliant benefit, the debs will be there, the post-debs, their married sisters, their mothers, and even their grandmothers, and all the men of the social set, too, of course.

David McCargos Living on Farm

Travel to Dorseyville, as far as the younger set is concerned, is going to increase. The young David McCargos (she's the former petite Gretchen Bickford) are home from their European wedding trip, and will be at home for the remainder of the winter at the Dorseyville farm of the youthful bridegroom's parents, the Grant McCargos.

Here's news of a Christmas party, not for the debs, not for the school set, but for the Ralph S. Richardses. They'll entertain at dinner December 30 in the Allegheny Country Club to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary.

Miss Rae Rice Weds Myrle B. Reinwasser

Announcement is made of the marriage on October 5 of Miss Rae Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rice, of Landleiss street, to Myrle B. Reinwasser, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Reinwasser, of Perrysville avenue.

Mrs. A. L. Fulton To Spend Yule Here

For the first time in 10 years, since she went to the Philippines to be married, Mrs. A. L. Fulton will spend Christmas at home this year.

She, with Lieut. Fulton and her small daughter, Annette Thackwell Fulton, will come from Fort Riley, Kan., to spend Christmas with her father and mother, the Rev. and Mrs. Frank Orr Johnson.

Their small daughter is named after Mrs. Fulton's mother. Her father is rector of Christ Episcopal Church, on the North Side, which many of the old Ridge avenue families attend.

Mr. Fulton is with the United States Cavalry at Fort Riley, one of the oldest posts in the country, built in the foothills of the Ozark Mountains.

Classmate Entertains Maxada School Pupils

Mrs. E. C. McHugh entertained pupils of the Maxada School and other little friends of her daughter, Mary Anne McHugh, at a Christmas party at the school yesterday afternoon.

The play which the young pupils of the Maxada School gave Sunday afternoon in St. Francis Hospital auditorium, for the benefit of the children's ward of the hospital, was attended by 450 persons.

E. D. Harshbarger's Son Home for Holidays

E. D. Harshbarger, Jr., a freshman at the University of Michigan, arrived home today to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Harshbarger, of Gladstone road.

Harshbarger has been pledged to Psi Upsilon fraternity, and been made a member of the Freshman hockey team.

New Kensington Girl To Wed Pittsburgher

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Miller, of Charles avenue, New Kensington, make known the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Adelyn Miller, to Saul V. Silverman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Silverman, of Wightman street, Squirrel Hill. No date has been announced for the marriage.

SPRING SHOE PREDICTIONS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IN CONTRAST to the high cut oxfords which have led the fall footwear parade, shoes for the spring season shown at the industry's official opening in New York this month indicate a decided trend toward lighter effects. Low shoes will be high in favor as the new season advances, but even when the old high cut silhouette is retained the new models will be modified and lightened through the use of cutouts and perforations. Closed oxfords will decline in popularity and open ties will be their logical successor.

Pumps, a favorite with well dressed women everywhere and particularly in Hollywood, are a leading type. It is interesting that in the collection of shoes specially designed by Vida Moore to illustrate footwear fashion trends at the seasonal opening, there was a goodly representation of pumps, not plain operas, but with a distinctive design feature achieved through underlays, appliques, cutouts and other treatments.

* * *

THE WIND swept line used in automotive, airplane and even in railroad trains influenced some of these lines, resulting in rounded toes and tapering heels. The aerodynamic trend was a feature of many of the new shoes.

Fashion authorities feel that as the weather improves women will want shoes that are actually cooler as well as lighter in appearance and two of the shoes illustrated reveal how this problem is solved. In the bottom shoe eyelets are used throughout the entire vamp in a bright color to contrast with the leather, with more than a score of these openings to admit air. In the shoe above, a good portion of the vamp is cut away and a series of small leather bows are used as trimming, forming interesting and effective air spaces.

* * *

THE AMERICAN footwear fashions for the moment are at variance with those of the Parisian bootiers who are featuring long toes again possibly to be different from the American trend which is putting much emphasis on the blunt toe and short vamp. The round toe is definitely a fashion here now, but the pointed toe may be the mode of the future, since Paris is sponsoring it.

Refinement in line and material is a noticeable feature of the new shoes. Even sandals are more restrained. Costume trends of course dictate footwear colors with the result that the new kidskin models are principally in black and brown for immediate wear, with interest in blue and Paris grey for spring, followed by white and gay colors.

Christmas Affair At Congress Effective

One of the most effective Christmas programs ever presented at the Congress of Clubs was that given yesterday after a candlemass luncheon. The past presidents, Miss Helen Grimes, Mrs. John S. Sloan, Mrs. Ralph Johnston, Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky and Mrs. George J. Campbell for Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, participated in an impressive candle lighting service with Mrs. Oliver J. Haller. Mrs. J. Charles Wilson read the story of the Nativity from St. Luke; there were carols by the robed choral directed by Elsie Breese Mitchell and during the afternoon Mrs. Mitchell sang a number for which she had written the words.

In "Sword of the Spirit," Mrs. Chester F. Johnston's adaptation of Henry Van Dyke's "The First Christmas," the various Congress departments participated.

Cruise Will Mark Double Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kovacs, of Duquesne, will leave Friday for New York from where they will sail on the S. S. Monarch for the Bahama Islands. They will visit in Bermuda, Kingston and Nassua.

Accompanying them will be Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kovacs, of Brooklyn, N. Y., formerly of Duquesne.

The trip will be in celebration of their fifteenth wedding anniversaries. They were married at a double ceremony.

Mrs. Joseph Strouse, of the Dithridge Apartments, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Erma B. Strouse, to Samuel R. Goldman, son of Mrs. Ralph Goldman, of Youngstown, O.

Miss Crawford To Marry in Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 19.—Eyes of Birmingham and Pittsburgh society were centered today on the Church of the Advent here, around which glimmers lights of red and green to symbolize the Christmas spirit, and where on the morrow, Miss Peggy Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon Crawford, of Pittsburgh and Birmingham, will become the bride of J. Kirkman Jackson, prominent Birmingham attorney.

From far and near society assembled in Birmingham to participate in gala social functions in honor of the couple. Only the parents of the bride will be in attendance from Pittsburgh, where the father of Miss Crawford is president of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company.

The bride will be attired in a frock of white satin and with orchids serving as the corsage. She will be presented in marriage by her father, the nuptial vows being read by the Rev. Charles Clingman, rector of the Church of the Advent.

Attending the bride will be Mrs. C. Bowers Freeman, of New York, bridesmaid; Mrs. David Guy, of Philadelphia; Miss Myra Loker, of New Orleans; Miss Dora Comer, of Alexander City, Ala., and Miss Sarah Nesbitt, of Birmingham.

Burrows Freeman, of New York, will serve as best man. Other members in atendance to the bridegroom will be George Conners, Jr., of Birmingham; John Leveret, of New Orleans; George Stubbs, Allen Johnson, Walter Brower, Willard Hagan, Arthur Crowder, Barney Ireland, Dr. William Gunter, Jr., of Montgomery, and Leonard Yerkes, of Birmingham.

Last night the bride and groom were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Johnson at a dinner at the Country Club here. Miss Crawford was attired in a frock of white satin embroidered in gold lace.

Children of Members Guests of Junior Club

Eighty-four little folk, all children of members, were guests of the Junior Woman's Club of Wilkinsburg in the Y. W. C. A. Community House early last evening. They were entertained, after a grand march, by stories and songs, an animated cartoon movie, a cleverly designed fish pond and a visit from Santa who distributed gifts. And then there were refreshments.

Seems to us that we should grow a long grey beard these days . . . that's how Santa-like we feel.

Especially when we discover that some wise-cracking creature has thought up combining gloves and muff in one . . . calling it Muff-Gloves, and planting it conspicuously at one of the stores. They are black or brown hairy woolens . . . with TREMENDOUS cuffs in astrakan-like woolen, which fold back to form a muff for your little paws! $4.00.

A cedar box for a lonely $1! We all but rubbed our eyes to believe what they saw. For cedar boxes are always far more than this . . . and the writing paper which they house is usually a decentish sum itself! It being white linen correspondence style paper . . . 24 sheets and envelopes . . . and well suited to all sorts of writing as letters go! And the box being one of those large ones with silhouettes on the lid, just by way of adding interest. And even little brassy keys to fit the miniature lock!

But to be a trifle snooty for the nonce (whatever the "nonce" may be . . . we never DID know) . . . let us recount our experience with the newest salts and peppers . . .

For although we see and do things . . . we don't pretend to know ALL about the ways of mice and men. And when someone came along and put a little chrome bar into our hand with two little chrome balls sitting on it, how could we have known they were salts and peppers? They were! And are! And should any of you contemplate a niceish gift for the young couple . . . your ex-hostess . . . your modern young mother . . . then these would be smarter than smart. Just two silvery balls sitting peacefully on a "log" (really a bar) of chrome. One for pepper . . . one for salt. $5 . . . and you're giving a gift of unusual distinction, and yet not elaborate enough to be out of line as a simple one!

They're terry-cloth lace . . . soft, and crepey, and swank. Done up in styles and colors to turn the head of any of their wearers. The colors being red and white combinations . . . brown and yellow . . . green and white . . . and the never-tiring black and white. Sizes 14 to 20. And when we say that they're only $3.95 . . . we expect to see your heels disappearing into the distance as you leap pajama-ward!

Being as how so many of us feel called upon to contribute to young brother's first tux . . . we ferret out this information on the new English collars which have settled down in one corner. They're linen . . . VERY smart (assurances from a knowing male) and would make marvelous gifts, 35c. We suggest you give two of them and have enough pennies left over to get him some of the handkerchiefs!

20th Century Club Hears Ratcliffe

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

S. K. Ratcliffe, a welcome visitor to the Twentieth Century Club yesterday, spoke of his address on "Literary London" as "a relief from the solemn round of current affairs," a subject on which he has been lecturing ever since he gave his first talk in the United States before the Twentieth Century Club a little more than 20 years ago.

Toward the end of the Victorian period and for some years after, England hung a special halo around the heads of her men of letters, Mr. Ratcliffe said. It was accepted as natural that such men should live in solitude, taking no part in any problems of their time. This state he contrasted with the present time—an epoch of dictators when there is great readiness on the part of the multitude to follow national figures in literature and art.

The speaker then went on to discuss Galsworthy, Wells, Bennett and Shaw, adding just before the close of his lecture a word or two about J. B. Priestly, Sackville West, Virginia Woolf, Hugh Walpole and one or two others. Although Galsworthy's American and European fame rests on his novels, he is best known in England for his dramas, and is the most accurate chronicler of a certain section of English society. Bennett, who has touched life at every turn, was spoken of as "the best listener among prominent men of letters and a most satisfactory human being." He displays a most ardent and incessant literary craftsmanship and combines high native talent with scientific management.

Mr. Ratcliffe spoke of H. G. Wells as "an opposite number to Arnold Bennett," told of his effective broadcasting voice which is not the voice of a platform speaker and said he was one of those novelists to whom every personal experience becomes early copy. Shaw, like Wells, has lost faith in mankind, has become an enemy of democracy, and believes the future of the world lies with dictators.

Mrs. Clifford Taylor Nature Club Speaker

Mrs. Clifford C. Taylor, State Federation chairman of work for the blind, will address the Nature Study Club at its meeting in the Congress of Clubs on Thursday evening. She will tell a Christmas story entitled "The Jewel." Music will consist of vocal solos by Miss Mary Logan and caroling in assembly. Articles made by the blind will be on sale.

P.C.C.W. Arranges Anniversary Celebration

The sixtieth anniversary of the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women will be celebrated at the Council House Tuesday, January 16, with a luncheon and card party.

The general chairman, Mrs. L. J. Feinaugle, will be assisted by the board of directors and the event will be in the nature of a reunion of new and old members.

A schedule of Saturday card parties for January is: January 6, Mrs. Frank J. Boyle, chairman; January 13, Mrs. J. G. Keener; January 20, Mrs. Robert J. Cook, and January 27, Mrs. David Edgar.

Mrs. Catherine Helfrich will sponsor the annual Christmas card party at Council House on Wednesday afternoon, December 27. Assisting Mrs. Helfrich will be her daughter, Miss Rose Marie, Mrs. Earl Carmody and Mrs. Charles Stack.

Miss Bowman to Preside At Wheaton Luncheon

Miss Jane Bowman, the new president, will preside tomorrow at the Wheaton Club's Christmas luncheon in McCreery's. Talks will be given by the girls who are home from Wheaton for the holidays.

One Chairman to Handle County P. T. A. Publicity

Allegheny County Parent-Teacher Association has adopted a new publicity plan and is handling all publicity through a central chairman, Mrs. R. P. Forsberg. From her comes announcement of the current meetings of county units.

The executive board of the County P. T. A. will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow at 10, a short business meeting preceding the Christmas luncheon at noon in Kaufmann's. Among the guests for the day will be Dr. Eugene Conti, Dr. C. E. Dickey, S. H. Replogle and Dr. J. B. Richey, a new member of the advisory board.

Crafton's Second Ward Association will hold its regular meeting tomorrow also, with departmental grades of the school in charge. The association is daily serving hot lunches to the pupils.

Emsworth unit will sponsor a dance for the alumni and friends to be held in the school auditorium Thursday, December 28, from 8 to 12.

Dr. Ben Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools, will be the speaker at the Christmas meeting of the Liberty Parent-Teacher Association. As is customary, the meeting will be held tomorrow, the last Wednesday prior to the Christmas holidays.

The meeting will be held around a lighted Christmas tree in the school auditorium. Carols will be sung by the audience and special music will be given by the Junior High School, the acapella choir and the Junior High School band.

The Christmas treat for the elementary school has been postponed until Friday afternoon, when the children will gather around the tree to sing carols. Santa Claus will have a gift for everyone.

David Pollock, guest violinist, and the Turner School pupils will furnish the entertainment for the December meeting of the Turner Unit of the Wilkinsburg Parent-Teacher Association being held in the Turner School this afternoon. The welfare committee has distributed winter clothing to more than 40 children. The membership has increased to more than 50 per cent of the families represented in the school.

A play and original cantata are being presented this afternoon under auspices of the Manchester Parent-Teacher Association. "When Toys Talk" the play, is presented by pupils of 3B and Hans Christian Anderson's story of the little match girl, music for which has been written by the children, is given by the fourth, fifth and six grades.

Children Guests Of Club Women In Homewood

One hundred and sixty children of the Homewood-Brushton community were guests yesterday afternoon of the Homewood Women's Club in the club rooms. After a hot lunch, the youngsters were entertained by James Heriot, boy soprano, who besides singing carols did a song and tap dance number, Miss Dorothy Miller accompanying.

Mrs. Elgin A. Hill told old Christmas tales, Mrs. Frank H. Fulmer led assemblying caroling and the children themselves contributed to the program. To climax the afternoon each little guest was presented with a bag containing toys, games, fruit, candy and two pairs of stockings and, led by Santa in the person of Mrs. Elmer E. Foltz, they marched to the Belmar Theater, where they were the guests of the manager, William Barron.

Also a part of the club's philanthropies was the distribution of baskets of food to needy families, which was made yesterday.

'Making Each Other Over' Wrecks Marriages

How important are manners and education?

Can a girl who has them be happily married to a man who lacks them—even though now she loves him?

Suppose you were that girl—what would your answer be?

Dear Elsie Robinson—

I have been going with a man for a year now, off and on. And now he wants me to marry him. I love him, but there is a great big "but" in my mind when I think of saying yes.

I don't know—maybe you will call me a snob—but there is one thing about him that bothers me. He is really a wonderful fellow, but he hasn't a good education, and his manners are very crude.

Maybe I sound crude, too, when I say that, but I went to the university myself, and was trained to use careful English. My mother was always very strict about manners. It isn't that I feel snobbish about it, but the things that Bob does grate on me sometimes. I catch myself not wanting my friends to meet him.

Yet I do love him. There is something about him that is very fine. When I think of giving him up, it hurts me terribly. Still, there is that doubt in my mind.

It makes me feel so unfair. I know it isn't altogether his fault. He didn't have advantages like I did, when he was growing up. Naturally, there are many things that interest me, that he simply doesn't know anything about.

FEARS UNHAPPINESS

But could we ever make a go of it, if we did marry? I respect all his fine traits. I know that he is conscientious and square. And he works hard. He is getting ahead in the world. Yet—would his ways, his ignorance and lack of culture, wreck our marriage; make me turn against him in time? Or would my love for him make me forget about them? Or, perhaps, could I change him?

Please help me. I don't know what to do. I don't want to give him up. But neither do I want to marry him and make him—or myself—unhappy. What do you think? Shall I marry him? HILDA.

Shall you marry him?

Not if you're ashamed of him, Hilda! If you did, you'd be doing him a terrible wrong. No marriage can survive if one of the partners is ashamed of the other.

WOULD BE RESENTED

You may think that you'd be able to conceal your feelings—that he'd never suspect that he grated on you—but you wouldn't be able to. And sooner or later, he'd begin to resent the fact that you looked down on him, and hate you for it. Then the smash-up would come.

But maybe you could change him?

Maybe you could, my dear, if you have superhuman tact and gentleness and understanding—if you could appeal to his pride in developing and improving himself—giving himself a better break with the rest of the world. But even then there would be a danger that you'd get superior and snooty, and remind him of how you'd made him what he was.

However, it might be worth trying—if you're understanding enough to do it without hurting his feelings or injuring his self-esteem.

But don't try to do it after you've married him. If you do it, do it while you're still free. For trying to "make each other over" has wrecked more marriages than anything else on earth.

Negligent Parents Lose Children Forever, Says Fay King

By FAY KING.

The parent who loses a child's love through desertion, cruelty or neglect, cannot hope to win it back in after years.

Ties of blood are not enough to mend the broken, hurt heart of long ago.

A child may still help a parent in need, but only good parents who never fail a child's love and trust and dependence can hope for lifelong loyalty and devotion that comes only from the heart.

Mother Graham to Be Informed of Danger From Avis

I felt as if I were a fish floundering in a seine as Lillian asked me whether I saw any other way out of the dilemma facing us than to tell my mother-in-law just what Avis Arlen was trying to do.

Dicky's mother has all of the sterling virtues, and few faults of character. Yet because of her captiousness and sensitiveness to slights, it is worth the Croix de Guerre—or so her son says—to broach any plan to her containing anything calculated to offend her sense of dignity.

Yet Lillian was telling me—and rightly—I knew—that I first must tell my mother-in-law that Dicky and I would be compelled to absent ourselves from this last dinner before the wedding of Mother Graham's oldest granddaughter, Mary Harrison, and then, in explanation of what she would consider a deadly insult to her daughter and son-in-law, the Braithwaites, must acquaint the feeble old woman with the menace to Mary's peace of mind which I felt Avis Arlen was bringing into the house.

But there was no other way out. I realized now that I had known it from the moment I had told Avis Arlen someone would meet her at Patchogue; and as it is never my way to dodge or to put off an evil moment, I threw up my head and answered Lillian.

"No, there is no other way out, but I need your help. Harry, will you go up to your room, where Dicky is administering the high justice, the middle and the low to Junior and Roderick?"

LILLIAN'S TASK

"Good Godfrey! You don't mean he's tanning 'em?" Mr. Underwood exclaimed in lovely horror.

"No, indeed," I told him, laughing, "just reasoning with them for the good of their souls. He'll tell you all about it. I haven't time. Tell him I want to see him in my room in five minutes if he can manage it. Also, will you have Jim bring Dicky's car around to the side door?"

"Anything else?" The big man lounged to his feet.

"Not now," I told him, and he moved swiftly toward the door.

"What's my job?" Lillian asked with a little laugh, but I sensed the comradely readiness to help that lay beneath her lightness.

"The hardest one," I told her. "Try to get Mother Graham in as pleasant a mood as possible in the next five minutes, and stand by afterward when Dicky and I have gone."

"Police! Also the state constabulary!" Lillian raised her hands in burlesqued appeal to the ceiling. "I'll tell the world you've given me a job."

Quickly I retailed Avis Arlen's reiteration that she must see Noel before his wedding, in order to "explain something very special, very precious, very sacred," between herself and Noel.

"I haven't words," she said loudly, "but I'm with you on what I guess is your platform. She shall not pass. She shall never reach the Marne."

"Thank you," I said. "That's what I've resolved. I'm going now to enlist the youngsters in the holy war."

"They'll be your best bet," Lillian said as we parted.

YOUNGSTERS TO HELP

I found Marion, Carolyn, Ronald and Bob in the little study, and their bright, alert faces were filled with curiosity and excitement as I sat down opposite them.

"Avis Arlen is plotting some mischief to Mary, I am sure," I began. "I don't mean physical injury, but—well, here's what she has told me."

I retailed swiftly the girl's attempts to have Noel meet her, and what she had said about wishing to see him. They heard me in respectful silence, but I had no sooner finished than they exploded into picturesque expletives which characterized Avis as the more unpleasant varieties of animal and insect life.

"There isn't any spray poisonous enough even to affect her," Marion said viciously, at last, "but I'm ready to go to the electric chair, if it's necessary to bump her off. How about you, Carol?"

"I'm with you," Carolyn said, with a vicious little snap of her teeth.

"I don't think you'll have to go to such lengths," I told them laughing. "But I do want a pledge from each of you."

"Name it," they chorused.

"I want you to see to it that Avis does not see Noel alone for one minute before that wedding—or after it," I told them solemnly. "Can you do that?"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A Gradual Change in Feeding Best for Baby

Recently I have received a number of letters from young mothers asking to be told how to wean a baby. This process is indeed an important one both for mother and baby. The problem is often bewildering and alarming to the young mother. Yet it is made to seem more difficult than it really is.

Dr. Copeland

"When shall I wean my baby?" This is the question most frequently asked.

As a rule weaning is started at about the eighth or ninth month. Of course, it may begin earlier, some mothers weaning their babies at three months or six months. If the mother is ill with a severe constitutional disease, or if her milk is of poor quality and lacking in quantity, partial or complete weaning must be undertaken speedily, no matter what may be the age of the infant.

The milk formula for the bottle should be simple at first and gradually increased in strength as the baby becomes accustomed to it. Sudden change to cow's milk may cause a digestive upset, vomiting, cramps, diarrhea, and loss of weight. The exact formula to avoid such disturbance, should be recommended by a physician.

It is always best to wean a baby gradually. This is done by first substituting one bottle for one breast feeding. If this agrees with the baby, omit another and gradually substitute all breast feedings with bottle feedings. The entire process should not take longer than one month.

Many mothers become alarmed because the baby loses weight when weaning begins. Be assured that there is no need for worry, because it is natural for the baby to lose some weight until becoming accustomed to the new milk. Of course, continued loss of weight must not be ignored. It is usually a sign that the child is not receiving sufficient nourishment.

Many mothers delay weaning unnecessarily. Bear in mind that the longer the delay the more difficult it may be. When weaning is done in a systematic manner and at the proper age, it is a simple procedure.

This is the time of the year when weaning may be accomplished without difficulty. Whenever possible, avoid weaning during the summer months. It is more difficult in every way for a baby during hot weather. Unless there are urgent reasons for proceeding, it is better to wait until cool weather comes.

Before the baby is ready for weaning, it should be given daily fruit juice, cereal and egg. I take it for granted, of course, that every mother gives her child its daily quota of cod liver oil. Give the child cod liver oil in the morning and evening and only discontinue it when the child is exposed to the rays of the run, during the summer months, or by special arrangement for the nursery in the winter.

Potato salad will taste extra good if it is mixed with the salad dressing while hot, or at least warm.

If flour is "lumpy," warm it on a plate in the oven before making cakes; a slight tap will cause the lumps to disappear.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Hold-Up

Most Bridge players are familiar with the principle of the hold-up as applied to the play of a hand at Contract Bridge—that is, the well-established rule that when holding but three cards of a suit led by the opponents, with only a single stopper in the combined hands, it is generally wiser to take the third round of the suit rather than the first or the second. This applies with double force when, in order to fulfill the contract, a finesse into the hand of the partner of the Opening leader is necessary. If the finesse must be made into the hand of the Opening leader and that is the only play to make the contract, then the hold-up while it may do no good, can do no harm unless a shift into a more dangerous suit is anticipated.

However much these principles may be appreciated in the abstract, it is a good thing for Bridge players once in a while to review their knowledge of the hand by actual tests. The hand below is an example:

North, Dealer.

East and West vulnerable.

	♠ A 6 3 ♡ K Q 2 ◇ Q 4 2 ♣ A Q 5 3
♠ Q 10 2 ♡ 10 8 7 3 ◇ K 7 3 ♣ J 9 7	North West East South	♠ K J 8 7 5 ♡ J 9 5 ◇ 9 6 ♣ K 8 4
	♠ 9 4 ♡ A 6 4 ◇ A J 10 8 5 ♣ 10 6 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

East's Opening lead is the spade 7, and when the Dummy is spread upon the table North counts his tricks. He has one spade trick, three hearts, four diamonds if the diamond finesse losses and five in case it wins, and the Ace of clubs. He cannot be sure of making all these tricks if East has a five-card or longer suit in spades and is permitted to regain the lead after the Ace is driven out. The diamond finesse must be taken into the West hand, and in order to prevent West from returning a spade, the Declarer plans his play upon the basis of permitting his opponents to win the first two spade tricks. The Ace of spades is driven out on the third round and then a diamond is led and finessed in the Dummy. This trick is won by West, but no return now can endanger the contract. West is void of spades and should he return a club, North, of course, should win with the Ace and proceed to cash the tricks necessary to assure his contract.

The play, as I said, is simple, but it is one on which many Bridge players go wrong because they do not stop to plan the play of the complete hand, count their winning and losing tricks, and determine the order in which suits should be developed.

TODAY'S QUESTION

	♠ A 3 2
♠ Q 8 4	North West East South

South is playing a spade contract and leads the Knave of spades. Which card should West play?

Answer—West should, on no account, play the Queen. If South's spades are headed by King-Knave there can be no good done by covering; and if they are headed only by Knave-Ten he probably has six, in which case East holds the King bare, and if West covers no trick will be made in the suit.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

With wide shoulders carrying strangely designed do-dads and the trim waist getting trimmer the torso is becoming more and more triangular. Everything in the way of bodice and coat fashions seems to go toward creating shoulder width. No good effect comes of all this unless the chest is high, bust developed. Get out the old rowing machine and go to it. Or if that's too much like hard work, do your calesthenics—arm lifting and swinging—and don't fail to wash out your lungs twice a day, pulling the air in down to your toes.

When grandma was a gay gazelle complexion troubles weren't what they are in this machine age. In the air was clean dust, it didn't stick. Now, soot chugged out by chimneys carries not only dirt but grease which settles in the pores of the skin, creates all kinds of havoc—as the modern city girl realizes well enough. There are various cleansing agents that serve to keep the complexion in tiptop form; it is wisdom to use all of them. Nothing quite takes the place of soap suds, so ply that once a day, preferably at bedtime. If soap proves irritating—it does in rare cases—substitute oatmeal or almond meal. Oily preparations seep into the pores, bring forth grime. Don't overlook the good effects of friction. And a complexion brush is worth its price, no matter what the price may be.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

An old world picture is easily simulated with the help of the new clothes. A new ensemble set features a fitted shoulder cape in heavy gray velvet with vertical sections of gray astrakan and big fur buttons with frog fastenings. There is a matching muff.

In the running is the waistcoat of leopard to be worn with suits or coats. Such a waistcoat is worn with a smart beige woolen suit, whose jacket has four patch pockets and its skirt a pleated inset in front. The waistcoat has a small upstanding collar.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Book Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I want to send a book to a young man. I would like to know how to autograph it properly . . . also what kind of a book to select? The young man is 21 years of age and a school teacher and very fond of reading. This is to be a Christmas present.

2—Is this letter-paper correct? J.

1—I always feel a bit of hesitation about autographing a book, as I feel more than a bit of hesitation about autographing a photograph. In most cases we cannot be sure that the person wishes to have the book or the photograph autographed. And unless we know the person especially well, it does seem to me more exquisite taste to write our message on either our visiting-card or on a plain white card, or enclose a note. Then we are sure that our social form cannot be questioned.

I suggest that you look at your book-sellers for an excellent biography . . . most men like these, and we have such a great choice among this sort of book these days. Or choose a book on some special enthusiasm of his, or on some hobby, or some sport in which he is especially interested.

2—I like your letter-paper itself, and it is in very good form. I do prefer, though, to have monograms engraved on letter-paper, rather than printed. And rather than have the monogram printed, I would prefer to have plain letter-paper.

Family Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me the correct way to address a Christmas card to a family, when the last name is alike and one wishes to remember them with one card.

Is either of these proper:

The James Greens
or
Dr. and Mrs. James Green and Family

DEE.

No, neither of these forms is correct. The phrase "and family" is not correct, ever, to use in an address.

The best way is to space your envelope lines carefully, and address it like this:

Mr. and Mrs. James Green
The Misses Green
Mr. George Green

Reformers Lose Zeal in Fight for Permanent Registration Bill

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURGH, Dec. 19.—Whether or not the Harris permanent registration bill for Pittsburgh passes this session of the Legislature, the fact remains that there has been an almost total absence of interest in this legislation by Pittsburghers, since the measure passed the Senate.

Mr. Shields

Perhaps that is a misstatement. Pittsburghers affiliated with the Republican regular organization have manifested an intense interest in the bills. They have looked out for amendments which would reduce the effect of bill. They have endeavored to set off the day for a new registration, to prevent any widespread change of affiliation next year.

But the reform element, the group presumably zealous in the establishment of permanent registration, has been conspicuous by its absence.

Senator Frank J. Harris steered the bill through the Senate. Mrs. Mary Denman, a former member of the Legislature from Latrobe, kept an eye on the measure, and there was some assistance from reform representatives who had numberless other things to engage their attention. But to no one was delegated the duty of watching solely the progress—if any—of this measure.

There was an assumption that the bill would be shoved along in the House, an assumption which never should have been held in view of its record of last session, when the House so seriously emasculated the measure that its proponents asked Gov. Pinchot to veto it.

* * *

Gets No Support From This County

When the House Elections Committee met last night to consider the bill, Representative John Scorza of the Third Ward was the only Pittsburgher present.

Representative Caputo, Democrat from Beaver, moved to report the bill out, but Mr. Caputo was a soloist on the proposition and the bill did not come out, because no Allegheny Countian exhibited any interest.

Representative Joseph G. Steedle, according to some advocates of the bill, prepared a few amendments. One struck out the clause providing for the signature of registrants, and another decreed that the bill should not become effective until the elections of 1935.

These changes in the bill are understood to have enraged the election reformers, whose interest now is being intensified—perhaps too late.

The final week of a session is not the time to exert pressure on a measure so important as this. It is legislative history that such bills get lost in the shuffle of adjournment or emerge in form amazing to their sponsors.

That offers little excuse. The record of the past is clear. The boosters of the bill should well have known what they had to look out for.

Now some of them are represented as being opposed to the bill because it does not embody everything they had hoped for. They are not in the humor to take what they can get at this stage of the proceedings, and try later for improvements.

* * *

Believe Measure Now Mere Political Issue

The prospecet is—unless there is a sudden and unexpected change—that there will be no permanent registration bill which the reform group will recommend to the Governor.

It is a fact that some of those legislative beseechers who had the Pittsburgh bill shouldered on them are skeptical about the whole thing. They talk rather freely, in confidence and not for quotation, about a belief that reform zeal withers when the harvest should be taken.

It is no secret that they believe the bill has become a political issue rather than a crusading cause. If it should pass, the issue would be lost.

They say with some ascerbity that in elections there are reform elements in Pittsburgh which cry to the heavens about the Republican organization and its attitude toward adjustment of the election laws.

But, they say, there is a strange lack of interest when the subject reaches the legislative halls.

I wouldn't know about this. I am so puzzled about where machines end and reform begins that I can't understand what is going on. But it looks mighty funny.

DEFENSE OPENS IN VOTE CASE RETRIAL

Plea to Have Action Quashed Because of Editorial Fails

The retrial of six election board officers of the Ninth District, Third Ward, was nearing a close today in Federal Court.

The government rested shortly after noon and defense counsel began calling witnesses, following the opening address by Attorney R. M. McWade.

The final government witness was Maurice Nernberg, handwriting expert. He testified two different persons using different pencils had marked ballots which were found in the box.

Most of the testimony was a repetition of that given in the original trial, which resulted in a disagreement by the jury.

An effort to have the trial discontinued today on the ground that a newspaper editorial was prejudicial to the defense, failed in a side-bar conference with Judge F. P. Schoonmaker.

MURDER CHARGE FACES SON

FRANKLIN, Pa., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Apparently much relieved to be left alone for a while, 19-year-old Walter Witherup, who officers say will face a murder charge in the death of his father, ate a hearty breakfast today in the Venango County Jail.

Sheriff E. M. Voorhies, who plans to file charges for the slaying of Clark N. Witherup, 50, oil operator, said the boy slept well and seemed somewhat brighter after a six-hour ordeal yesterday, in which the father's death was re-enacted.

Youhg Witherup has not yet engaged counsel, but expects his mother and brothers to visit him later.

He insists that the death of his father from shotgun wounds was accidental. He told officers a shell jammed in a gun he was cleaning and the charge struck his father, who was sleeping in a hunting cabin near Kennerdell. He plans to plead not guilty when arraigned.

SUNDAY MOVIE BAN REFUSED

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Refusing flatly to stop the new practice of Sunday movies in Johnstown, Mayor Eddie McCloskey today suggested to a group of indignant ministers that they go to Harrisburg and protest to Gov. Pinchot.

If the Governor wishes to enforce the state law closing Sunday shows, let him do it, the Mayor told representatives of the Johnstown Ministerial Association.

McCloskey took the position that Sunday sports legislation discriminates against women and for this reason he favors Sunday movies to provide Sunday entertainment for them.

The ministers walked out of a City Council meeting yesterday after that body decided to leave the matter in McCloskey's hands. They informed the Council that the Salvation Army, which was to receive part of the proceeds, had declined to accept the money.

Romance Dies as Doug, Lured by Society, Becomes Nomad

CHAPTER EIGHT

By MARJORIE DRISCOLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 19.—Ostensibly, it was the Walker Cup golf tournament that took Douglas Fairbanks abroad in 1930 and brought about the first long separation between himself and Mary Pickford.

Never athletic, never particularly interested in sport, Mary had tried valiantly to interest herself in the strenuous life that her husband enjoyed. Now she found herself confronted with a new problem of diverging interests.

To Mary Pickford, a title meant very little. She liked people. She would just as soon talk to a studio prop man as to a prince: rather, if the prop man were a pleasant companion for a chat and the prince had little beyond his title to recommend him.

She found as much, or more, pleasure in giving a party for children from an orphanage or a group of extra girls from the studios as she did in presiding over a glittering dinner party.

But Douglas Fairbanks got a taste of associating with nobility, spending week-ends at ducal estates, going on big game hunts with titled men—and he liked it.

On their trips abroad, Mary renewed those friendships which she cared to keep, but she was always glad to get home.

Douglas Fairbanks became restive.

He dashed off to England for the Walker Cup matches. He came home and rushed off to the Orient—again alone.

GAME NOT IN JUNGLES

In 1931, he was off again for Europe and India, big game hunting. And the big game he hunted, according to word drifting back to Hollywood, did not always stalk through the jungles. Sometimes it frequented Mayfair drawing rooms, Parisian salons, Roman palaces and gay night clubs.

He was at home for Christmas of 1931, but a month or so later, he sailed for Tahiti. In May he returned, and in August he was off for the Gobi Desert and the Malay Peninsula.

Last January, he departed for Europe to play golf with the Prince of Wales. When he came home, he announced that he was going to China to make a picture, but instead he went back to Europe.

MARY ADMITS PARTING

And early in July, Mary Pickford, her eyes filled with tears and her voice broken with sobs, confirmed the report that she and her husband had separated.

It was not until it became known that Pickfair was for sale that she admitted what had happened.

Many times it had been rumored that Fairbanks was urging his wife to sell the house and be free to go. She had always refused. She said:

"I love to travel, but I love Pickfair better. It's thrilling to watch one's own home grow and grow."

When it was no longer possible to keep up her brave front, she made the admission quietly and with dignity. She said:

"It is true that Pickfair is for sale and that a separation between Douglas and myself is contemplated."

Still she sought to defend her roving husband.

"I don't want to say that there will be a divorce. Divorce from someone you love as dearly and tenderly as I have loved Douglas for so long, is an almost unbearable thought."

Later in New York she said:

"Pickfair is not for sale—at present."

RECONCILIATION RUMOR

That brief statement gave rise to countless rumors. The gossips had it that her trip to New York meant she would sail for England, there to meet her husband and seek a reconciliation. It was

One Fine Drink That Needs No Gaudy Bottles

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The world's most essential fluid that has never been the subject of an amendment. It's cold water.

A drink that we cannot do without. It cools the 11-cornered headache and soothes the parched tongue. That's ice water.

They don't put it up in glittering bottles with fancy labels. There is no 1500-foot law against it. You can sip it at the old town pump or lap it up by the side of the mountain brook.

But, we bet if we voted on it tomorrow, some states would hold out against it.

Operator 13 Sees Man She Loves Leading Rioting Mob

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Sergt. Wright and Policeman Warren were carried into the station, wounded. Back marched their comrades, also, and formed a double line of battle facing east and west toward the two avenues, where the defeated mobs were threatening another assault.

From 300 Mulberry street came the order: "Well done, Sixteenth. Go ahead and drive them; then start for Pier Four, North River!"

Police Telegrapher Chapin, Chief of Detectives John Young and Detectives Bennett and Radford, all in disguise, came into the station and joined the outward march of the Sixteenth toward Sixth avenue; but when the mob saw them coming it fled.

The police matron, who had been calmly knitting and watching the battle from an upper window, now came and led Operator 13 into her own quarters and made the girl lie down. For forty-eight hours she had not slept. She slept now on the matron's bed.

About 5 o'clock in the evening the matron awoke the girl, saying there was a message for her from Mulberry street. The police telegrapher on duty, John Duvall, handed her the slip.

"Sorry to wake you, ma'am," he said.

Operator 13, yawning, read the message:

"We have reason to believe that the notorious Confederate agent, Capt. Gailliard, has organized a body of Confederate sympathizers who are determined to destroy the ironclad Dunderberg at Webb's shipyard.

Suffering Girl

"Col. Nevers' regiment of veteran ex-service men is now ready at the Seventh Regiment Armory to intercept this mob. The colonel is under particular orders to arrest or kill Gailliard. You will report to Col. Nevers, in order to accompany the regiment and point out the spy, Gailliard, or, if he be among the dead or the prisoners, to identify him.

ACTON."

The girl sat down beside the telegrapher and began to cry.

"Tell him," she said in a choked voice, "that his order shall be-be obeyed."

Rains Flood 2,000 Homes Near Seattle

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Two thousand homes in Aberdeen and Hoquiam were flooded today as the winter rain mounted past the 23 inch mark. Damage has been estimated at more than $100,000.

Heavy gales continued to sweep the coast towns, although in less velocity than the raging 90-mile gale which caused havoc in the North Pacific Sunday.

VICTIM UNDER $2,500 BOND FOR ASSAULT

Fate Writes Climax To Fantastic Quarrel

The death of Theodore Rantovick, 44, of Brinton avenue, Trafford, under the wheels of a bakery truck late yesterday in Trafford disclosed a fantastic feud in which a man lived in almost constant fear of his life, according to police.

Police said that Rantovick last Wednesday had been held in $2,500 bond for court appearance to face charges of assault and battery with intent to kill and violation of the firearms act, on complaint of Andrew Kovack, 56, also of Trafford.

FEARED FOR LIFE

Chief of Police C. G. Brandt, of Trafford, who made an information before Justice of the Peace John S. Sloan, of Trafford, said Kovack had told him he feared for his life.

During the hearing Kovack testified that Rantovick visited him on December 11, during which the two became engaged in a fight. Rantovick, he said, slipped a rope around his neck on the "pretense of presenting him with a necktie for Christmas" and drew a revolver, Kovack said, after he had beaten Rantovick off with a shovel handle.

INSURANCE CANCELED

State police said two $400 insurance policies had been issued on the life of Kovack. Both were canceled recently by the insurance company, police said. They also reported that a mysterious attempt was made about a year ago to burn the shack in which Kovack lived. Rantovick was questioned but was released.

Rantovick was struck by a truck driven by Gerald C. Kennedy, of 6567 Ladson street, police said. He suffered a crushed chest and died shortly after admittance to the Braddock General Hospital. The truck was owned by the Liberty Baking Company, police said. Kennedy was held in $2,500 bond on a manslaughter charge.

CANCER SALVE TRIAL PUSHED

ROCKVILLE, Md., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The State of Maryland today continued its efforts to prove through witnesses that the "secret cancer cure" salve applied by Dr. Harry Street, of Washington, and Dr. Sherwood Ferris, of Chevy Chase, Md., was responsible for the death of Mrs. Cora Britton, of Mays Landing, N. J.

The trial of the two physicians on charges of manslaughter opened here yesterday. In his opening statement the chief counsel for the defense announced that he would endeavor to prove that the death of Mrs. Britton, which occurred in Baltimore last May, was the result of pneumonia and other ailments not resulting from the salve.

The treatment, according to the defense lawyer, had been used with successful results on others.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott yesterday called upon four doctors and a nurse in his effort to prove that Mrs. Britton was comparatively well when she began taking Dr. Street's salve, which was applied while she had a room at Dr. Ferris' house, and that she was in a dying condition from a burn when removed to a Baltimore hospital nine weeks later.

GRAHAM TO PAY WITNESSES

Pittsburgh school teachers who testified in the government's vote fraud hearings, including a score of teachers in the Fourth Ward who were important witnesses, are assured the support of Dr. Ben G. Graham, school superihtendent, in receiving regular pay for the time they were away from their classes.

Although teachers are instructed to report to their principals when they are subpenaed for court appearance and wish to be excused without losing their pay, Dr. Graham said he would ask the school board to arrange for the absences in cases where the teachers failed to follow this procedure.

However, he said he had no personal information of teachers testifying in the vote fraud cases.

Lower Car Fare War Opened by McNair

The Legal Committee on Transportation Problems is seeking to provide a program by which Mayor-elect William N. McNair may reduce street car fares and effect changes in Pittsburgh's traction system. The committee has started work studying charters and franchises granted years ago to 92 street railways companies, now by leases and agreements forming the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

The committee also is making an examination of the traction conference agreement put into effect 10 years ago.

The agreement expires May 1.

U. S. HOME LOAN 'CHISELERS' HUNTED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, said today the government's legal agencies were investigating individuals alleged to have sought commissions in connection with applications for home loans.

Fahey said the Justice Department's bureau of investigation had been requested to pursue the "chiselers" and that the Postmaster General would make a similar inquiry involving possible use of the mails to defraud lenders and borrowers.

"We are placing at the Department of Justice such information as we have obtained concerning the activities of persons who, claiming special influence with this corporation, have attempted to obtain commissions from either mortgagees or mortgagors.

"The complaints of this sort are not limited to the state of Illinois. We have information concerning similar attempts in some of the other states.

"Supplementing our own inquiries which have been under way for some weeks, we are asking the Department of Justice to carry the matter through with a view to prosecution if the evidence appears to be sufficient to warrant that course.

"Because we have every reason to believe that the mails have been used in some of the cases of which we have learned we are also asking the Postoffice Department to make an investigation."

In a statement yesterday, Fahey said those charging commissions or representing that they had special influence with the corporation were subject to terms of imprisonment running as high as five years and fines up to $10,000 or both.

William G. Donne, corporation manager for Illinois, resigned yesterday. There had been charges that the Chicago office was making excessive appraisals and that some brokers were asking commissions on the ground that they had a "stand-in" with corporation officials.

Fahey today appointed Henry G. Zander, Jr., of Chicago, as Illinois manager, succeeding Donne, and Philip W. Kniskern, of New York City, to be consulting expert on appraisal problems. Kniskern has been assigned to Illinois.

FRANCE FLOUTS HITLER IDEA

PARIS, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The French government prepared today to marshal the entire country behind its refusal to accept the armament demands of Chancellor Hitler of Germany by asking a vote of confidence before the parliamentary new year.

An overwhelmingly favorable vote was predicted, approving the French and Little Entente stand that Germany may not increase its armaments by action outside the League of Nations, from which it resigned this year.

War chiefs meanwhile will meet as a council of national defense to review the France-German military situation.

BERLIN, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—The Hitler government has re-affirmed its demand for an army of 300,000 regular conscript troops, with one year of compulsory service, and for the right to possess all weapons recognized by the Geneva Disarmament Conference as "defensive" without limitation, according to a note to the French foreign office today.

ANTI-HITLER CRY JAILS 10

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Several hundred men and women gathered outside the German consulate today in an anti-Hitler demonstration.

A large detail of police strove to preserve order. About 10 demonstrators, alleged to have shouted "Down with Hitler!" were held.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Twenty-five hundred Communists and their sympathizers jammed lower Broadway and Battery place late today in a protest against the Hitler government. Fifty mounted police and 75 patrolmen skirmished with the leaders. The Communists carried hundreds of banners attacking the Hitler government and marched to a cadence of, "Down with Hitler!"

Romance Dies as Gay Society Lures Doug

whispered that Fairbanks might come home.

Mary said quietly that she was not going abroad.

Over in Europe, Fairbanks said nothing. He refused to make any comment on the separation. And, Mary's close friends said, his silence extended even to his wife. If she waited for a word from him, that word did not come.

London dispatches announced that Fairbanks planned to make pictures abroad on a pretentious scale. It was rumored that he intended to "bring back to England many of the great English artists who have made their names in Hollywood."

That rumor died out, although there remained occasional talk that Fairbanks would make at least a few pictures abroad.

MARY TURNS TO WORK

Mary Pickford, the separation admitted, went quietly ahead with her own plans for work and study. She revealed that she had been trying her hand at writing, and had completed a novelette and a short story.

And Hollywood waited to see what would happen.

Mary waited for five months, while Fairbanks traveled about Europe, visited his friends in England, went to St. Moritz for the winter sports.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. — Beth Sully's son—came here from England, where he had been with his father, and said he knew nothing about the situation; that he had brought no message from Fairbanks to Mary.

SUIT MADE PUBLIC

That same day—it was only a coincidence—Mary Pickford's divorce suit against Douglas Fairbanks was made public.

She accompanied the filing of the suit with a brief dignified statement in which she said:

"During several years, my married life has become increasingly unhappy. The future appears to offer no solution. It is with the deepest regret that I am filing suit for divorce."

That has been the only comment that she would make upon the divorce. Leaving Los Angeles the next day after the filing, and traveling to New York, she was besieged by interviewers.

Greeting them with a friendly smile, she talked about her plans to look for a play, to travel, to study languages, to spend Christmas in New York.

HER HARDEST ROLE

She talked quietly and sincerely about the new religious faith that had come to her through long seeking: a simple, hopeful, trustful faith.

She spoke her husband's name, if it entered into casual conversation, with a tremor in her voice.

But she would not discuss the divorce or her married life.

Because Fairbanks must be served by publication, unless he changes his plans and comes home, the hearing will not be held until early next year. And then Mary Pickford must steel herself to play the hardest role of her life.

In a Los Angeles courtroom, she must take the witness stand to testify to the allegations in the divorce complaint; the complaint in which the unemotional language of the law sets forth the things that wrecked a happy marriage.

'ANGUISH' CITED

It is charged against Fairbanks—

"That he has shown a lack of consideration for the plaintiff's feelings and sensibilities, and has constantly and consistently carried on a course of conduct which has caused plaintiff grievous mental anguish . . .

"That since on or about June, 1930, against the wishes of the plaintiff and with distant and indifferent attitude toward her wishes and desires . . . he has continuously absented himself from home for months at a time . . .

"That by reason of plaintiff's status and position as an actress, this course of conduct has caused much criticism and unfavorable comment throughout the world . . .

"That he has publicly announced that he has no interest in life excepting travel . . .

"That such conduct rendered the proper discharge of the duties of married life impossible and was such as to destroy the legitimate ends and objects of matrimony."

Thirteen years ago, at her wedding dinner, Mary Pickford said:

"I never was so happy before —I never expect to be so happy again."

It was prophetic.

Just before the divorce suit was filed, a deed was recorded, placing Pickfair in Mary's name.

But her friends—and Mary Pickford has hundreds of them—are confident that Mary, who has never permitted sorrow to embitter her life, will carry on with a smile.

One chapter in her life will be closed, but the pages will be sealed down and she will find something happy to write on the pages of the future.

Dog Makes Long Trip Home in 3 Months

Home for him is the Franciscan Order's establishment here. A year ago, Mike's owner, the Rev. Eligius Weir, of Joliet prison staff, gave the dog to an eight-year-old Chicago boy, John Surges, who took Mike there.

Quiet Colors Urged In Convict Sweaters

LANSING, Kan., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Kansas State Penitentiary style note: All sweaters sent to inmates as Christmas presents must be in subdued tones.

MARY TO STAR IN NEW PLAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Mary Pickford, of the screen, will appear in a play about the middle of February.

It hasn't been written yet, but Max Gordon, who will manage it, said the show was being written "by one of America's leading playwrights" not further identified. Gordon said the play would open out of town.

Miss Pickford's last local appearance in a play was under the management of the late David Belasco with a cast that included Lillian Gish, Ernest Truex and others who have since been starred.

Crawford to Admit Second Murder

LEESBURG, Va., Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Counsel for George Crawford, Negro, convicted with a recommendation of life imprisonment for the slaying of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, yesterday notified county officials Crawford would plead guilty to the murder of Mrs. Nina Buckner, Mrs. Ilsley's maid, provided the death penalty were not invoked.

Crawford was convicted of the Ilsley slaying last Saturday. He had been charged with slaying both women, but was tried for the Ilsley murder alone.

MECHANICS FIX VOTE MACHINES ON OWN TIME

The next disposition of Allegheny County's 1,100 voting machines probably will be announced by County Commissioner C. C. McGovern within the next 48 hours.

Meanwhile four unpaid mechanics, who claim to have corrected the repeat voting fault in the machines, remain "political hacks and tinkerers," in McGovern's opinion.

Report of successful negotiations for overhauling the machines and criticism of the unpaid mechanics came from McGovern today as he discussed his cherished plan of turning over the machines to a "reputable firm."

NO EXAMINATION

Discussion revealed that McGovern had not examined the improvement made by Mechanics Walter Astley, John Gray, M. B. Cameron and Mark Mullen.

Discharged some days before a test by the Harris committee proved double voting possible, the men have since experimented on their own time. They claim to have produced a lever which prevents stripping of the gears and consequent double voting by slipping into neutral.

But McGovern offered them scant credit:

"How do we know this improvement is any good? This is about the fourth time the Elections Department has announced a perfected machine. It'll just break down again.

"This state of things will continue until we get a responsible firm to do the work. You can't pick up men like these, any sort of mechanic, political hacks and tinkerers, and expect to have them understand an intricate machine."

BACK ON PAYROLL

As for their working free, McGovern said he could find hundreds of men willing to "tinker for nothing." The four in question went back on the payroll yesterday.

McGovern did not reveal the nature of his coming announcement. But he has consistently repeated his desire to have a "responsible godfather" for the machines, whose parent firm has disintegrated.

JAILED ARTIST IN NEW TANGLE

International News Service.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 19.—McClelland Barclay, noted illustrator, found himself in another legal tangle today.

The artist, who recently has spent almost as much time in courts and court proceedings as in his studio, was charged by C. F. Maguire, Stamford, Conn., attorney, with refusing to complete payment for legal services.

Barclay recently was sued for back alimony by his divorced wife and spent a couple of days in jail in Bridgeport, Conn., on a charge of defaulting in alimony payments.

Dead Today

HERBERT THACKER HERR

Mr. Herr, Westinghouse Electric vice president in charge at Philadelphia, dead today. He was aged 57.

H. T. HERR DIES, WESTINGHOUSE EXECUTIVE

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Herbert Thacker Herr, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Pittsburgh, died today. Herr, who was 57, was a widely known engineer.

He died in his suite at a Philadelphia apartment hotel. He will be buried in Pittsburgh, where the funeral will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in Calvary Episcopal Church.

Herr had been ill about five months.

The industrial executive was born in Denver, Col., where he married Miss Irene Viancourt in 1896. He is survived by his wife, two children, Herbert, Jr., of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Murial V. H. Brown, of Hartford, Conn.; a brother, Arthur T. Herr, of Denver, and a sister, Mrs. J. W. Chase, of Altadena, Cal.

Herr was the inventor of locomotive air brake equipment; improvements in turbines, oil and gas engines, and remote control for steam turbines such as are used in electrically propelled battleships.

WYNEKOOP JURY TO HEAR 57

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Prosecutors will draw upon 57 witnesses for evidence to be presented at the trial of Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop in the operating table murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, the state disclosed today.

The list of prospective witnesses contained the names of many persons who heretofore had not been mentioned in the case. And what evidence they might hold remained a mystery. The list was furnished on the orders of the court.

That the prosecution intends to explore the extra-marital activities of Earle Wynekoop, husband of the slain Rheta, was indicated by the names of several of Earle's girl friends included in the list. Among them was Margaret McHale, from whom Wynekoop assertedly exacted a promise of marriage while he was still wedded to Rheta.

COLLEGE GIRL FOUND DEAD

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Pajama-clad, Miss Betty Hope, 25, former Barnard and Smith College student and more recently a pupil at the Art Students League in Manhattan, was found today lying across her bed, dead, in the home of her wealthy corset factory father, Theodore Hope, in Katonah.

Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire announced he would conduct an autopsy. Her father said:

"Betty seemed perfectly well. She had not been known to suffer from any heart ailment. We feel certain, though, that the autopsy will show death was due to natural causes."

The girl's body was found by her brother, Charles, when he went to awaken her.

FEAR OF EMPIRE IN MANCHUKUO STIRS CHINA

By JOHN GOETTE
International News Service.

PEIPING, Dec. 19.—The Chinese government is convinced that Japan intends to establish a Manchukuo empire on the first of January, proclaiming Henry Pu-Yi, president dictator of the new state, as emperor.

This was learned as Chinese officials took all possible measures to forestall a Manchu restoration, which they feel would endanger the sovereignty of the Chinese republic.

Pu-Yi will come naturally by his mantle of purple if it falls on his shoulders. He is the far-famed "Boy Emperor" of China, who reigned for a few years in his early youth before the fall of the celestial empire under the imperial title of "Hsuan Tung."

ABDUCTED BY JAPS

When the republic was proclaimed, he fled to the international concession at Tientsin, where he remained in obscurity until abducted by the Japanese and rushed to Manchukuo aboard a warship to take his place at the head of the new state.

As proof of their contention that Japan is moving swiftly toward creation of a new Asiatic empire to bulwark her position on Asiatic soil, Chinese officials pointed to week-end occupation of strategic points in Chahar Province by Japanese and Manchukuo troops.

CHINA PROTESTS

They referred particularly to seizure of points along the eastern border of Chahar, adjoining Manchukuo and directly north of Jehol, which is also in Japanese hands.

Ho Ying-Ching, Chinese minister of war, called on M. Shibayama, Japanese military attache here, demanding immediate evacuation of Japanese troops from these points. Whether he protested verbally against any attempts to cloak Pu-Yi with an imperial mantle could not be learned.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—A detachment of 1,000 Japanese troops from Manchukuo were reported entering Chahar province from Jehol today to oust 300 Chinese bandits menacing the Manchukuo border.

TOKIO, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Japan launched a new 527-ton torpedo boat today which some observers believe to be outside the provisions of the London Naval Treaty.

The new torpedo boat, the Hatsukari, is a sister ship of the Chidori, and is of the latest type, carrying three 13.7 mm. guns, and machine-guns. It is capable of a speed of 26 knots.

Former Boy Emperor's Wife No. 2 to Enter Convent

PEIPING, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Pretty Wen Hsiu, "Number 2 Wife" of Henry Pu-Yi, president-dictator of Manchukuo, today announced plans to enter a nunnery here.

Divorced by Pu-Yi two years ago, Wen Hsiu complained she never received any alimony. Members of the former Manchu court here took a collection to pay her initiation fees in the convent.

At the time he divorced her, Pu-Yi called Wen Hsiu the "most disgraceful wife" of any Manchu emperor in 300 years of the dynasty.

FLIER PLANNING SEA HOP LOST

Pond and Sabelli had been waiting more than two months for favorable weather to start their proposed flight to Rome. Sabelli told police last night that Pond called him Saturday morning, asked him to get their plane ready and told him he would get a final weather report that night. Sabelli said that was the last he heard from Pond.

Miss Lillian Edgerton, Pond's secretary, said she saw the flier Saturday afternoon at Pennsylvania Station just before she took a train for Trenton.

She and Sabelli said they believed Pond had met with foul play or was a victim of amnesia.

Pond was a pioneer in ship-to-shore flights.

P. R. R. HOLDS UP NADINE PLAN

The promised surcease from the Nadine bottle-neck along the Allegheny River boulevard, promised for January 15, turned out today to be nothing but another mirage.

The temporary crossing over the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks will be ready for opening, all right, the County Commissioners were informed, but the railroad will not permit vehicular traffic over it until they get a permit from the Public Service Commission.

After two years of negotiations the County Commissioners reached an agreement with the railroad tracks would be removed from the course of the highway. But while an underpass is being constructed the railroad retained permission to run coal cars across the temporary highway to a pumping station along the river. The railroad, without a permit from the P. S. C., the Commissioners were informed today, would be liable for damages if anyone should be injured while crossing the tracks.

Today the Commissioners ordered a Public Service Commission application immediately.

JEWS TO HONOR GOLDBERG

The world today recognizes the need of the Jewish race to have a homeland with its own government, Abraham Goldberg, of New York, world Jewish and Zionist leader, said today in stressing importance of establishing Palestine.

Goldberg is here as guest of the Zionist District of Pittsburgh tonight and will be honored at a birthday testimonial observing his 50th birthday at the Y. M. and W. H. A. There will be a public reception at 8:30 p. m. He recently returned from a tour of Europe and Palestine, after attending the World Zionist Congress at Prague and the World Jewish Conference at Geneva.

Citing the German situation, Goldberg said that if a homeland government existed then its own representatives could have directed negotiations with Hitler in his restrictions on the Jewish race. He will relate conditions in other countries in a talk at tonight's dinner. Rabbi B. A. Lichter is chairman of the local committee arranging the program to honor Goldberg who is one of the founders of the Zionist Organization of America, Order Sons of Zion.

Nail in Lung Fatal To Girl After 2 Years

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Jean Buckingham, 4, who lived for two years with a nail in her lung, was dead today from an infection that had developed.

VET'S HOSPITAL DEATH PROBED

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—An allegation that William McNamara, 35-year-old war-crazed veteran, was kicked to death in the North Chicago government hospital was being investigated today by authorities, including the government.

James Cox, 25, a guard at the hospital, was arrested yesterday. United States District Attorney Dwight Green sent an investigator to the hospital. A warrant, charging murder, was issued by order of State's Attorney Charles E. Mason.

The authorities said Irving Ramsdell, a technician at the hospital, told them he saw Cox attack the veteran. Cox denied the story, saying he and McNamara had fallen together on a slippery floor.

CORTEZ TO WED ON CHRISTMAS

By LOUELLA PARSONS
Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 19.—The house is bought, the furniture moved in and the wedding set for Christmas Day by the bride-to-be, Mrs. Christine Lee.

The bridegroom, Ricardo Cortez, finishes his work on Wunderbar, the Al Jolson picture, in a day or two, and while he admits the wedding bells will ring out along with the Christmas chimes, he will not be pinned down to a definite hour.

Members of his household are, however, less reticent. Christmas is the day given and the place the new Beverly Hills home, purchased by Cortez for his beautiful bride.

This is a second marriage for each. Cortez was married to Alma Rubens, whose tragic death was such a blow to filmland. Mrs. Lee was married to Lester Lee, wealthy New York broker. She obtained her divorce from him in Reno and came directly to Hollywood to renew acquaintance with old friends.

Ex-Senator Finkel Will Speak Tonight

Former State Senator Samuel B. Finkel of Boston, president of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods, will be chief speaker at the Chanukah celebration in the assembly rooms of the Rodef Shalom Congregation, 4905 Fifth avenue.

The Men's Society of the Congregation is sponsoring the celebration. Mr. Finkel, who also is chairman of the New England Association of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, will discuss "Religion and Science."

Truck Runs Wild, Imperils Students

A meat packing truck, out of control, endangered several University of Pittsburgh students as it careened several hundred feet over lawns in University place, late yesterday, according to a police report.

The front wheels of the truck, driven by Howard Lytzer, 36, of 1419 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, became locked, police said. It finally lodged between two large trees. Lytzer was uninjured.

Border to Border and Coast to Coast

Short, short story: Meyer Davis, a cub reporter on the Washington (DC) Post many years ago—pictured the day when he would be the star reporter on that sheet—so that he might get the assignment to cover the White House party. Perhaps you read the announcement in the papers the other day—that the orchestra which will play at the Roosevelt's White House party on December 30th—will be conducted by—Meyer Davis.

The Hays organization in New York has barred Frank Capra's flicker, "Man's Castle," which deals with the unemployed colony in "Hooverville," on Riverside Dr. In the film, one of the characters dwells with a girl in one of the shacks. The Hays office demands they be married.

No benefit of clergy—no showing.

In the column called: "The Private Papers of a Reporter," an affectionate salute was directed at Lowell Limpus on the staff of a Manhattan newspaper. It was revealed how Mr. Limpus was "the man behind the typewriter in the La Guardia campaign," and it was added that Mr. Limpus prepared many of the next Mayor's speeches.

The reporter telephoned his appreciation, and hoped it would be said the story was true—except that not he, but Fiorello La Guardia himself wrote the campaign arguments. So be it—sorreh.

The new N. Y. Express, due soon, will offer Sid Weiss, of Yonkers, as its radio paragrapher. Master Weiss, who took down notes for the Yonkers papers, contributed regularly to our "Things I Never Knew Till Nows." Just a Weiss guy.

In sum—another of our contributors makes good in the big city. Almost every local columnist at one time was our contributor.

Mae West turned down $15,000 for one week at Ford's auto show in Cleveland—against 50 per cent of the gross—a terrific figure. Amos 'n' Andy were offered 10 Gs and wanted 15. No dice.

The London troupe of the hit, "She Loves Me Not," is almost set but can't sail because the only available leading lady is Dorothy Lee of the screen—who asks $750 per week. Too much money.

Polly Walters, the enchanting leading lady in the local company, receives only $100 per week! Most girls would pay a premium for the role, which certainly will lead to better assignments.

Miss Walters apparently is shrewd. It might comfort her to learn that three years ago Katharine Hepburn received $75 (after being cut $25) when she had the lead in the stage version of "Warrior's Husband."

Kate just spurned an air offer of $6,000 per week.

Nifties from Elinson: The return of liquor will now give the Forgotten Man a chance to forget . . . A department store is really an ideal place to have a few drinks. You can ask the clerk to have you sent! . . . The papers say that La Guardia went to Washington to get money for the subway. Gee, why didn't he say something? I'd have given him the nickel . . . Aw, what's the use? Just as I learned not to be afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf—along comes the fella in the raccoon coat.

Col. Sam Johnston, one of the great military heroes of his day, who probably has as many, if not more, medals than any other living man, and who was in charge of the United States Army at Vladivostok, Russia, is now a minor clerk in the Interstate Commerce Dep't in California.

In 1926 when Eddie Cantor's movie version of Ziegfeld's "Kid Boots" was playing in St. Louis

—the theater went in for heavy ballyhoo and other advertising. A flier also advertised the movie in the skies—his plane carrying a huge banner spelling "Kid Boots." He got $10 a day.

A year later he was the most famous man in the world.

Among other names that we are now being called, we like this one best. In Hollywood the wags call us "The Big, Blab Wolf!"

New Programs For Screen

The Four Marx Brothers are starred in "Duck Soup," a musical comedy that will open Thursday in the Enright.

* * *

Victor Jory and Irene Bentley have the featured roles in "Smoky," story of a wild horse that is tamed by a rider who takes a liking to him. The picture will open Thursday in the Fulton. It is based on the book by Will James, cowboy author and artist.

* * *

Marion Davies and Bing Crosby come to the Penn screen Friday in "Going Hollywood." It is a musical comedy concerning a lovelorn lass who falls in love with the radio voice of a crooner and pursues him to Hollywood, where she becomes a great star.

* * *

"The House on 56th Street," photoplay opening Friday in the Stanley, features Kay Francis and Ricardo Cortez. The central character is a woman whose husband is killed in the World War while she is in prison. Later she falls in with a card shark.

* * *

With Charlotte Henry as Alice, and Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie, Charles Ruggles and many others in the cast, "Alice in Wonderland" will open Friday in the Davis.

Playboy Acts In Variety

Harrison R. McCready, Pittsburgh "playboy," makes his debut as an actor in the new Variety burlesque, "Broadway Scandals." He appears in a night club sketch called "A Playboy at Play." McCready makes his entrance accompanied by blonde Bee Keller, the "Mae West of Burlesque," in the second act of the show. In the skit he showers stage money on the girls of a cabaret.

"No question about it, I went over with a bang," McCready told those backstage after his act. Among them was Teddy Joyce, who stopped over in the city en route from Hollywood to open an engagement in London. He was the first to congratulate McCready on his initial efforts as an actor.

"Broadway Scandals" has a cast of principals that also includes Ada Lenard, Lew Walker, Ruby Shipman, Paul Niles, Dona Davis, Kirk Brown, Mae Belle, Lee Hickman and Billy Mifflin, the latter two old-time burlesque comedians.

Villa Royale to Offer Girly Floor Show

The Villa Royale, opening tomorrow night, has prepared a bill that will include Jean Wald and her 10-girl orchestra and other girls in a song and dance floor show. The Villa, Babcock boulevard and Thompson Run road, will be under the management of Lew Mercur.

Dogs of Jeanette MacDonald And Rudy Vallee Fight

By HARRISON CARROLL
(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 19.—So far as is known, Jeanette MacDonald, singer, and Rudy Vallee, crooner, have nothing against each other, but their two mutts staged the film colony's wildest dog-fight—and right in the lobby of the fashionable Beverly Wilshire Hotel.

It all happened when Jeanette, on her way to M.G.M. to talk about "The Merry Widow," met Rudy entering the hotel.

Their two purps—Jeanette's English sheep dog, Captain, and Rudy's half-Chow-half-St. Bernard, Windy, took one look at each other.

It was a case of spontaneous combustion.

For 10 minutes the battle raged. Clerks ran from behind the desk, the late breakfast crowd dashed from the dining room. Finally, a group of bell-boys moved in on the combatants and pulled them apart.

The net result was that Jeanette's Captain had to be taken to the dog hospital for repairs.

"It really was a draw," she said, "But I doubt if the management of the hotel will ask a rematch."

In a simpler bungalow down the way, Constance Cummings couldn't find a bottle opener. She sent her aid over to borrow one.

If Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., really wants to fool anybody about Gertrude Lawrence, he ought to cultivate a poker face when he reads those cablegrams which are delivered, at least once, and sometimes twice, a day, to the "Success Story" set at RKO.

Thanks for all those letters suggesting a new name for Ginger Rogers—although I meant that you should write to the star herself at RKO. After a process of elimination, Ginger is now considering three names: Rochelle, Lela and Virginia.

Lela is her mother's name and Ginger rather favors it. But her mother insists on Virginia, which is Ginger's own name.

However, the final choice may be something else entirely, so if you have any good ideas write them.

No woman is more particular than George Raft about the color scheme of costumes. Unable to find the right shade of hat the other day, Georgie sent a sample of a blue-gray suit and asked a prominent hat company to match it.

They've just written back thanking him for suggesting a new shade.

Has anything been printed about Jack Larue's narrow escape in an automobile accident? The star was severely cut about the head and lost much blood. Physicians had to shave off part of his hair, so he will play his role in "Good Dame" with his hat on . . . Frances Dee and Joel McCrea are giving up Garbo's former house in Brentwood. Joel says there are too many drooping trees and it's too gloomy for a pair of honeymooners . . . "Cotton" Warburton, U. S. 'Pooh for the Prince,' Mr. Durante Says

Just who do those guys, the Prince of Wales and John Barrymore, think they are? Jimmy Durante wants to know. The "schnozzola" realizes two of his screen ambitions in Reliance's "Palooka," comedy production for United Artists.

He gets the chance to run the sartorial gamut, and make violent love to one of his favorite stars. Full evening dress, cutaway coats and striped pants, spats, cane, toppers, sports wear, brocaded pajamas and satin lounging robes are his dish—and he necks Lupe Velez as she's never been necked before!

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Teddy Joyce, one of the most popular masters of ceremonies ever to serve in Pittsburgh, as well as one of the most versatile in the matter of entertainment ability, will show the folks to what degree he has progressed since leaving. He will show 'em in the Pitt, which has booked a unit attraction, "Bottom's Up," for its next stage bill, to open Friday as part of the Christmas program. Teddy will do the mastering in a production constructed on the "presensentation" idea, with varied scenes and an ensemble of 16 Chester Hale dancing girls. For some time Joyce has been on the Pacific coast at the head of an orchestra, and he arrived here the latter part of last week, en route to New York. He expects to go later to London to play a vaudeville engagement.

* * *

"Richelieu," which Walter Hampden will present in the Nixon Christmas night as the opening attraction among four plays, was written by Bulwer Lytton for William Charles Macready, most popular actor in England at the time it was presented, March, 1839, almost a century ago. It was the basis of the historic quarrel between Macready and Edwin Forrest, as popular in America as Macready was in England. Forrest visited England and wanted to include "Richelieu" in the plays he was to give. He had played it in America, but the author made demands for royalty that caused Forrest to believe they were inspired to Macready in a mean spirit, and he wrote letters to the papers expressing that idea. Later he was hissed for a performance of "Macbeth" in Edinburgh and he also blamed that to the activity of Macready's friends. Some time later the English actor came to America, and the quarrel between the two was resumed, resulting in a riot in New York in which 22 persons were killed. Quite evidently both the actors and their followers took the art of the stage very seriously in those days. All of the heroic players of the American stage, from Forrest to Booth and Booth to Hampden, have played "Richelieu." Mr. Hampden, however, employs a version written for himself by Arthur Goodrich, one that is more adapted to modern stage technique. It will be given four times, including Wednesday matinee. There also will be two performances of "The Servant in the House," and one each of "Hamlet" and "Macbeth."

* * *

It has been a regular custom for George Arliss to rehearse the casts of his pictures for three weeks prior to the start of shooting. Twentieth Century, which will star Arliss in "The House of Rothschild," now has an idea to complete the full rehearsals and then try the story out in a Hollywood theater to audiences before submitting it to the cameras. With a revolving stage it would be possible to present virtually all the scenes of the picture in full length. "The House of Rothschild" will have a cast of more than 80 principals.

Herbert Mundin Going Back to England

Herbert Mundin, the English comedian, who was drafted from Charlot's revue to appear in Fox productions, will leave for London on January 15 under a loan arrangement to British Gaumont. After appearing in English films he will return to Hollywood March 1.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

They're in Again!

A FEW days ago, there arrived at my desk a letter from Mr. Augustus Nalee, of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Mr. Nalee regretted the trouble I had encountered in his famous establishment on the previous night, and explained why it had been necessary for the hotel to charge me corkage on the wine I had brought myself.

This was all very nice, except for one fact. I have not been in the Waldorf for some six weeks, and I never had the slightest bit of trouble in that grand spot at any time. I immediately phoned Mr. Nalee for the lowdown, but I knew exactly what it was before he told me. Once again, some phony was going in for the impersonation stuff.

This bum certainly shot the works in the Waldorf. He brought his own wine, which is pretty low in the first place, and then howled to the heavens when they very properly handed him a corkage charge. Claiming to be me, he threatened the hotel with every punishment under the sun. As I understand it, he was lucky to get out without being clipped on the chin.

I have no false sense of modesty in my make-up, but I don't really get the point of these impersonations. If I were truly a big shot and something could be gained by the phony claim, then everything would be very clear.

But I'm not a big shot. I'm just a mug who writes decently on occasion, landed a column through a lucky break, tries to be honest with the next guy, and struggles on through the years. When I have longed so many, many times to be the other fellow—why should the other fellow long to be me?

Nevertheless, during my brief career, I have had some truly remarkable experiences with people who went around posing as me. I've written about a few of them from time to time, and the customers seem to get a kick out of them. Here, then, are several more that hit my memory:

Going back through the years, I recall the most embarrassing impersonation I ever encountered. The first thing I knew about it was when somebody called me up and told me about my actions at a Greenwich Village party.

I tried to tell the gentleman that I hadn't been to a party in Greenwich Village since I grew old enough to know better. But I could get no where with my explanations. So I hung up and let it go at that.

That call, however, was only the beginning of a series of annoying events. I finally decided that a gag was a gag, and that I had had just about enough of that particular thing. I communicated with two detectives who were friends of mine and told them the entire story. And they went out to get their man.

It took them exactly one night to catch him. When they had him in the station house, they phoned me.

"He admits everything," I was told. "Says he's been impersonating you for a couple of weeks and that he just did it to have some fun."

Sometimes, of course, the impersonator isn't able to go along for any great length of time. There was one chap used my name in one of the cheaper dance halls, along Broadway about eighteen months ago. He must have carried on in beautiful fashion because two of the girls from the ballroom phoned my office the next day, wanting to know if I felt any better and was I going to take them out again soon?

Two nights later, a man answering the same description entered a dance hall in Harlem. This time he wasn't quite so lucky. The proprietor of that dance hall is also a night club owner and he knew me quite well. I don't like to tell you what happened up there, but I will say that that particular impersonator never used my name again. I have no objection if you use your imagination.

What did that jackass gain? What thrill could he possibly enjoy? What fools people can sometimes be!

Some five years ago, when I reached my office of an afternoon, I found two or three messages of a very disturbing nature. One was from the manager of the McAlpin Hotel, another was from the West 30th Street station house and a third had come from a cab driver.

Piecing the story together after some investigation, I found that a stew had raised a rumpus in the lobby of the McAlpin around three that morning. He had claimed that he was me and he finally grew so noisy that the management had to put him out. He climbed into a taxi and ordered himself driven around.

The driver was evidently notified by the stew that he was Hellinger. And then, to make a long story short, the stew borrowed $3 from the chauffeur to go into a restaurant. Foolishly enough, the driver waited. Naturally the stew disappeared. So the driver was out $3 in cash and $2 on the clock.

He raced to the Thirtieth Street Station House and notified everyone that I had cheated him out of $5. As soon as I heard the nonsensical story, I told the detective to send the driver to my office immediately.

The driver proved to be a huge colored man. I had him sent in and he sat down beside me. I asked him if he knew who I was and whether he had ever seen me before. He said he had not.

"Well," I said, "I'm Hellinger. Am I the man you drove around last night?"

He gulped. He knew the stew had been a totally different character from me. But the poor fellow saw his $5 vanishing rapidly. So he took one long chance.

"Ah don't know," he replied. "All ah can say is you did get a little thinner!"

Toll of Years

Native Talk Demanded

How far the talkies have departed from the once desired "English accent" is marked by the case of Frances Drake, new actress who is one of George Raft's four leading women in "Bolero."

Frances Drake is a young New York girl who went to England nearly six years ago to visit her grandmother and a cousin, and liked it so well she stayed on.

About the time Frances left America Ruth Chatterton was preparing to launch on her career as a talkie actress, whether she was aware of the fact or not.

Miss Chatterton's debut in sound, with a voice that spoke an English scarely intelligible in some parts of this country, furthered the popularity in Hollywood of what came to be described as the "English accent."

Players who didn't have it sought it through elocution, players who did have it got jobs. It lasted a while until Iowa and Michigan and other states that spoke 'plain American" got in their votes, and then it was the other way around.

Genuine English players who spoke with or without accent flourished as before, but the girls and boys from the Bronx and Dubuque and Kalamazoo returned to normalcy in enunciation.

And it has gone so far now that Frances Drake, who acquired a British vocal color during her sojourn abroad, is being made to work hard to lose it!

Noted Artist Doing Sets

Art, declares Willy Pogany, "can't be taught, and it is silly to fool people into thinking it can."

This large-faced man with a shock of tousled hair and soft lambent eyes, who is now in Hollywood doing a series of imaginative and fantastic sets for Busby Berkeley's dance numbers in "The King of Fashion," never took an art lesson. He jumped from a mechanical engineering draughting board in Budapest to illustrating for French journals.

"The vigorous, industrious, wideawake student is never an artist, however successful he may be," he says.

Pogany plans to settle down permanently to work in Hollywood with motion picture experiment.

"Because," he says, "it presents so many problems. That's all art is, solving problems."

While in Hollywood, Pogany plans to do some of the many portraits he has promised, but never painted, for leading Hollywood stars.

McNair's Secretary To Address Club

Percy R. Williams, secretary to Mayor-elect William N. McNair, will speak on "The Single Tax Theory" at a meeting of the International Club in the downtown branch of the Y. M. C. A. tonight. An open forum will follow. William A. Scheder will preside and Attorney Emanuel F. Schifana will be chairman.

Mr. Williams will speak in the place of Dr. R. B. Machatton, who was to have spoken on "What Is Happening in Cuba." Dr. Machatton, a former resident of London and for several years located in Havana, was called out of Pittsburgh yesterday.

CHACO TRUCE DECLARED

International News Service.

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 19.—Bringing a suspension of a year and a half of open warfare between Bolivia and Paraguay, in which tens of thousands have been killed, a truce in the Chaco war will go into effect this midnight.

The truce will last until midnight of December 31. Meanwhile representatives of the warring countries, delegates to the Pan-American conference, and the League of Nations peace commission will unite in striving to effect a permanent peace.

Children Santa Forgets to Get Toys

Leo G. Altmayer will distribute toys to needy children at the annual Christmas party of the Volunteers of America, 724 East Diamond street, December 29. The party is scheduled after Christmas so those children whom Santa Claus "forgets" will be amply taken care of.

Dance at K. of C. Home for Students

An informal dance for public and parish high school students of Chartiers Valley will be held by Chartiers Council, Knights of Columbus, at the council house, Crafton, next Tuesday night. The event is one of a monthly series.

'BUYERS' SEIZE CAR ON TEST

Two men last night forced James Caruse, salesman for J. S. Hanlon, Inc., automobile agency, 5870 Baum boulevard, out of a machine he was demonstrating to them and drove off in it.

The two "prospects" called at the agency and, selecting a used car, asked a demonstration, telling Caruse to drive out Frankstown road.

DOLL LADY

Offers Only One More Week to Get

"HONEY-SUCKLE"

"Honeysuckle" is 18 inches tall, just the right size the average little girl would like to cuddle up to. The word beautiful doesn't really describe her. She's more than beautiful—she's GORGEOUS.

"Honeysuckle" has flexible rubber arms and hands and rubber legs that can be washed just the same as you would wash your baby brother's or sister's. And WHAT A SMILE! And behind that smile are the most lovable, most roguish eyes you ever looked into. They open and close and she rolls them from side to side like a real flirt. By pressing her legs or by moving her body forward or back, she says "Ma-ma" in the sweetest voice you ever heard. She's dressed like a little queen in dainty organdy and lace, with bonnet and shoes to match.

Oh, we forget to mention her cute dimples, and just as this was written "Honeysuckle" looked up and seemed to say, "Yes; you forgot to tell them about my rubber panties."

"Honeysuckle" is really the DOLL OF ALL DOLLS, and she is going to be so easy to get for Christmas. You must, however, get your orders in this week.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

Saves Good Money! No Cooking!

If you want the best cough remedy that money can buy, mix it at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money—a real family supply. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, clears the air passages, and thus ends a severe cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

MOGULS FINALLY ADMIT ALTERATIONS IN BALL

An amusing side to the official announcement that the major leagues have voted to standardize the baseballs used in the two loops, and that Presidents John A. Heydler and William Harridge will select the type of uniform sphere to be employed, is that this is the first time the magnates have admitted they ever made any change in the pellet. For 13 years the moguls denied alterations. Even in the days of the rabbit ball they insisted no change had been made, and that the breaking of home-run records was due to heavier bats, longer swings, and restrictions placed on the pitchers.

John A. Heydler

Last year, when the early stages of the pennant races were featured by a flock of remarkable pitching performances in which few hits or runs were allowed, the league chiefs denied that the ball had been made less lively. It was just because the weather was too cold and damp for the batters to get in condition, they said, leaving the fans to infer that the sun was shining on the pitching mound and not on the batter's box. Nor would the officials admit for an instant that there was any difference between the types of ball used in the two loops.

Now they gravely announce that the baseballs are not what they used to be, that the big leagues have decided it is all wrong to use different kinds of agates, and that a uniform ball, the degree of liveliness yet to be determined by the two presidents, will be in play next year. No reference is made to those denials of recent years.

IRISH WIN IN BOWL WITH LIGHT TEAM

If lack of weight were the only drawback to Columbia's chances for victory in the Rose Bowl football game, the Lions might find by looking back on Notre Dame's 27-to-10 victory nine years ago that a seeming handicap of that nature is not always a hopeless one.

Bill Henry, of Los Angeles, settles a lot of arguments about the size of Notre Dame's players on that occasion by recalling the real figures—not hearsay stuff, but the actual weights. Henry knows, because he did the weighing. Coast critics doubted the published Irish weights, so Henry went down to Tucson to meet the South Bend squad and verify the figures. At the suggestion of Coach Knute Rockne, the visitor first got on the scales to try them out and then weighed the team himself in the basement dressing room of the University of Arizona. In the backfield he found Stuhldreher weighed 156 pounds, Jimmy Crowley 165, Don Miller 161, and Elmer Layden 164. In the line, Collins and Hunsinger, the ends, went 179 and 170, respectively; at the tackles, Joe Bach scaled 184 and Rip Miller 182; at guard, Johnny Weibel weighed 170 and Noble Kizer, 169, and at center, Adam Walsh, the heaviest man among the regulars, tipped the beam at 185.

LAYDEN PACKS RARE POWER AT 164 POUNDS

The total weight of the immortal Four Horsemen backfield was 646 pounds, and the average only 161½. The average weight of the forwards was 177, and the average weight of the 11 first-string players was only 171½. The figures definitely establishing Layden's playing weight at 164 pounds are particularly interesting to Pittsburghers. Despite his lack of heft, the retiring Duquesne coach and new chief at Notre Dame, packed rare power. As a coast football historian describes him, Elmer could "run like a deer, smell plays a mile away, plunge through center like a heavyweight, back up the line of defense, punt out of sight and just generally raise merry Old Ned."

Elmer Layden

A Notre Dame substitute on that trio was Joe Boland, who is to be line coach for Layden at South Bend. Boland, a bulky, good-natured Irishman, subbed at Joe Bach's tackle. Rockne introduced him to a rooter in this manner: "Joe plays right tackle and weighs 240 pounds." Joe was all smiles. Having impressed Boland and the rooter, Rockne added, "And he's never been across the line of scrimmage in his life."

FLEMING AMONG WASH-JEFF GREATS

The name of Malcolm D. (Red) Fleming, who died suddenly yesterday in Altoona at the age of 44, must be included in any list of the all-time football greats at Washington and Jefferson College. As a blocking or interfering halfback and a player of the fighting type, Fleming, who wore a W. & J. uniform under Coach Bob Folwell in 1912-13-14, when Pitt was beaten three times in a row, played a far greater part in the success of the 1913-14 elevens than has been generally credited to him.

The seasons of 1913-14 were two of the proudest in the history of the Washington school, and Fleming helped to make them so. In 1913, when Russ Goodwin was captain, the Red and Black did not lose a game, outplayed Yale in a scoreless tie, and led the country in scoring with 347 points against only 13 for opponents. In 1914, when W. & J. celebrated its twenty-fifth year in football, the team captained by Burleigh Cruikshank lost only to Harvard, 10 to 9.

For two years Wash-Jeff ranked with the greatest teams in the country, and some of the players individually held similar high ratings, including Fleming, Johnny Spiegel, Goodwin, Cruikshank, Brit Patterson and Wesbecher.

Others on the squad were Bill and Vic Younkins, Schwab, Young, Moser, Springer, Bovill, McKean, Heyman, Braden, Kline, Clarke, Cornwell and McPherson. Spiegel, a speedy, elusive ball carrier, made Walter Camp's second all-America team at halfback in both seasons.

DUKES ON NEW CHAPTER IN FINE RECORD

Playing their second game of the season here tonight against Ashland, following the opening of the schedule last week with a decisive victory over Waynesburg, Duquesne University's basketball performers are fairly launched on another chapter of a remarkable record that stretches back over a period of nine years. Few other colleges have been as consistently successful as Duquesne in the floor sport, and from all indications the Dukes are headed for another big season that will maintain the high standard they have attained on the hardwood courts under the able coaching of Chick Davies, long established as one of the best basketball mentors in the country.

Chick Davies

The victory with which the present season was started was the 138th scored by the Bluff passers against only 49 defeats in a total of 187 games played since the beginning of the campaign of 1924-25. That spells a percentage of .738, meaning that the Dukes have won an average of practically threeout of every four contests.

BAILEY'S DEATH ANTICIPATED LATE TODAY

International News Service.

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—Battling against apparent overwhelming odds, Irvin (Ace) Bailey, 31, Canadian hockey flash, continued his amazing struggle for life in City Hospital today, with brain specialists predicting the end for tonight or early tomorrow.

Under all the principles of medical science Bailey should have been dead within four hours after his crash with Eddie Shore, of the Boston Bruins, at Boston Garden last Tuesday night. But day after day and night after night his physical power and indomitable will, have aided him in the grim fight.

Early this morning Dr. Donald Munroe and Dr. Joseph Hahn, who performed two brain operations, that that the end was coming. Bailey gasped, but medical treatments and his vitality and courage brought him back from the brink. As the morning advanced, Bailey lapsed into a sound sleep. Dr. Hahn said:

"He may live through tonight and into tomorrow, but that is all. His pulse is 160 and his temperature 105.6. He has been given mild stimulants and alcohol rubs. I am amazed that he is still alive."

Prior to this Bailey's brain condition was reported in hand, with no further complications expected, but his general condition was weaker, and carbon dioxide and oxygen and heart stimulants were administered.

Charles F. Adams, president of the Bruins, announced that the entire receipts of tonight's game between the Bruins and Montreal Maroons would be turned over to Mrs. Gladys Bailey, wife of the injured player. Adams said that about $10,000 would be realized and that the managements of the club and the Boston Garden would take care of all the expenses of the game.

HEADGEAR PLANNED

DETROIT, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—A headgear for hockey players, similar to those worn by football players and one which would prevent such injuries as those suffered Irvin (Ace) Bailey, of the Toronto Maple Leafs, is being designed by Jack Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings.

FIGHT RESULTS

By CARL W. SHATTO

Several chips off the old blocks will attempt to play lacrosse "like their daddies used to do" when the Buffalo Indians meet the Yellow Jackets for the North American Professional Lacrosse Association lead at Motor Square Garden at 8:30 tonight.

The ancestors of the Buffalo Indians were Indians long before the name was applied to sports organizations made up of pale faces. They are members of the Seneca and Huron tribes, among which groups lacrosse was a popular and ancient sport when Sitting Bull was looking for his first scalp.

VISITORS COLORFUL

Included in the Indian lineup are such colorful (they're really redskins) performers as Little Elk, Deer Foot, Young Deer, Silver Heels, Longboat and Running Deer. To make more easy the task of signing checks, these young bucks have adopted a second group of names, more prosaic handles in which Smith is the popular choice. Four of 'em are known as Smith, and two as Martin. The others showed more originality, and went in for distinctive names such as Ven Every.

That the Indians still know how to play lacrosse is indicated by their position in the loop standings. They are deadlocked with the Jackets for first place, and the winner of tonight's battle will have an undisputed hold on the top rung.

SCORING LEADERS

The Indians lead the league in the matter of scoring. They have tallied 47 times in three games, but they have allowed 43 enemy goals, which indicates that their backfield hardly is in a class with Pittsburgh's rock-ribbed defense. In rolling up 19 goals against Toronto, last Friday, the Jackets flashed plenty of scoring punch, and a "wide open" game is anticipated.

Buffalo suffered its first defeat at the hands of the Milwaukee Bruins two days ago. Because the local world champs turned back Milwaukee in the season opener here, they will rule strong favorites to continue their victory string. The probable lineup:

No.	Pittsburgh.		Buffalo. No.
1	Cordick	G	Little Elk—16
2	P. Langevin	D	Deer Foot—15
3	N. Langevin	D	Big Jack— 1
10	LaFrance	C	Tecumseh— 6
9	Vincent	F	Young Deer—12
7	Buoliane	F	Mt. Pleasant— 5

Pittsburgh substitutes—No. 8, Jennings, forward; No. 12, Loughran, defense; No. 4, McLean, center; No. 6, Core, forward; No. 5, L'Heureux, defense.

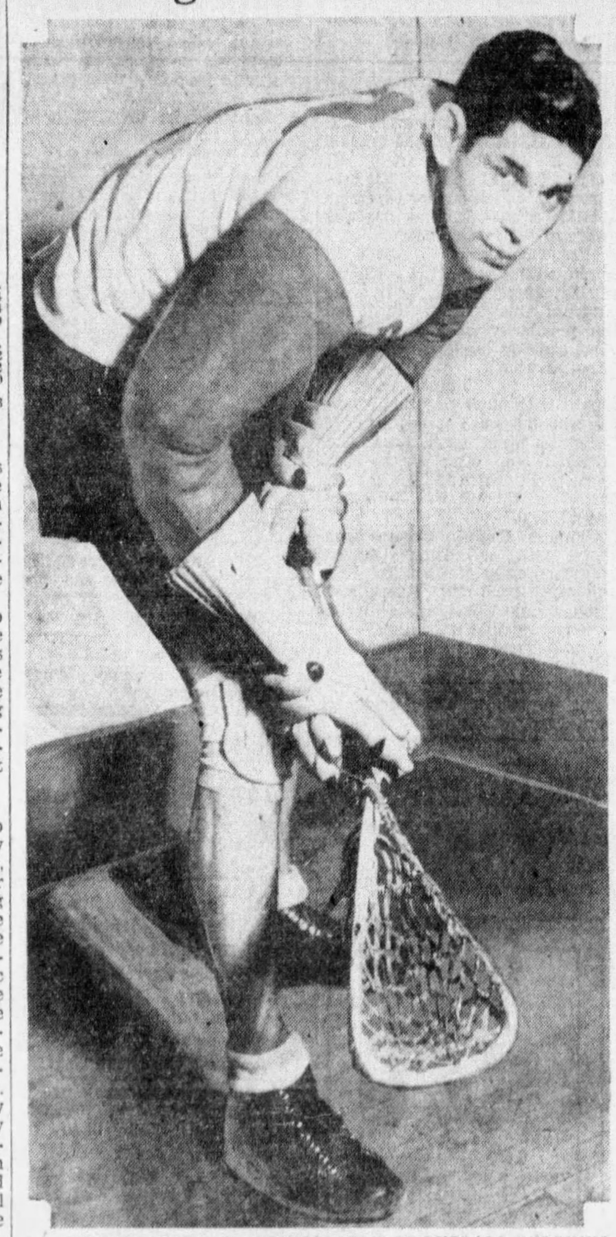
Buffalo substitutes—No. 7, Longboat, center; No. 8, Silver Heels, forward; No. 10, Running Dee, forward; No. 14, Chief Martin, forward.

Referee—E. A. Corey.

WOLFE BEATS KISER

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, of Memphis, last night won a decision over Ray Kiser, of Tulsa, Okla. Wolfe delivered a hard punch that gave him credit for winning.

Running Deer—Smith to You



DON SMITH, CAPTAIN AND FORWARD OF BUFFALO REDSKINS

Four of the members of the all-Indian lacrosse team representing Buffalo in the National lacrosse League and opposing Pittsburgh at Motor Square Garden tonight have adopted the name of Smith. Don is one of them. His Indian name is Running Deer.

JOCK SPEAKER AT AMBRIDGE

Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, was the principal speaker at the annual banquet given the members of the Ambridge High School squad, champions of the Beaver Valley, in the Ambridge High School gymnasium last night.

The Ambridge eleven, coached by Maurice (Moe) Rubenstein, went through its second successive season without meeting a defeat, a tie with Midland in the final game of the season ruining its chances to retain the class A title of the W. P. I. A. L., awarded to Scott High, of North Braddock.

J. R. Miller, superintendent of Ambridge schools, was toastmaster. The speakers included Mrs. George Kelley, a member of the school board; H. S. Irons, principal of Ambridge Junior High; N. A. Smith, principal at Ambridge High; Leslie Watters, assistant coach; Coach Rubenstein, Milton Smith, who presented the lettermen with gold footballs; Dr. S. H. Westland, who presented the trophy emblematic of the Beaver valley championship; L. C. Barthelmeh, of the Board of Trade, who presented the members sweaters; Dr. W. Hutchinson, who introduced Dr. Sutherland; Dr. Skip Gougler, freshman coach at Pitt; Capt. Joe Perricelli, Burgess P. J. Caul, Paul Kurtz, Barry Bridges and Julius Levin, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

OKLAHOMA A-M AND HASKELL ARE BOOKED

By JESS CARVER

The Dukes have eight of wh likely will be a 10-game footba schedule for 1934 lined up an are going strong. Elmer Layde is leaving the Bluff, alright, bu he's fixing the university, fo which and with which he ha labored for the past seven years a right nifty program to be turne over to his successor.

Four of the opponents the Duke will face next year were not on the card this year and a fifth ha not been met since 1929. The remaining quartet all were played and defeated, this season, they being Waynesburg, West Virginia Detroit and Bucknell.

OPEN WITH JACKETS

As the schedule stands a present, the Dukes will open agai with Waynesburg, then take o West Virginia, Asland, a new comer; Bucknell, the Haskell In dians, back again after a three year lapse; Detroit, Oklahoma A and M, and Carnegie Tech in row, skipping the date of Novem ber 3 which is open and probab will remain so. Games have y to be booked for November and November 29.

Geneva, Pitt, Wash-Jeff, West ern Maryland and Westminste all played this year, are out as fa as 1934 is concerned, but th Dukes hope to be back on th schedules of the Panthers, Pres dents and Western Marylande in 1935.

The contract with Oklahoma A and M, one of the strongest team in the Middle West, calls for a contest here in '34 and one at Stillwater in 1935. Next year's game will be a daylight affair at Forbes Field. The Aggies have won 18 out of their last 34 games, lost 10 and tied six, not a ba record at all. The schedule date follows:

September 21—(Night) Waynesburg.
September 28—(Night) West Va. U.
October 5—(Night) Ashland College.
October 12—(Night) Bucknell.
October 19—(Night)—Haskell Indians.
October 26—(Night) at Detroit U.
November 3—Open.
November 10—Oklahoma A. & M.
November 17—At Carnegie Tech.
November 24—Open.
November 29—Open.

FLORIDA PLANS SET

Morning workouts will get under way today in preparation for the game in Miami New Year's Day with the University of Miami. The squad will depart at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of December 28, via the P. R. R. to Washington, and from there take Clyde Barton's Seaboard line to Florida. The team will arrive at its destination December 30 and the return home likely will be delayed until January 3.

Tonight Coach Chick Davies sends his basketballers out for their second test of the campaign, if it may be designated as such. Ashland College, of Ohio, will furnish the opposition. Ashland hardly takes rank with the leading varsity fives of the nation, but Duquesne supporters will recall that a few years back, another team came popping out of Ohio, practically as unheralded as the Ashlands, and all the Dukes got for their pains was a lacing. That team was Ohio Northern and it was quite a team, too.

GRID CONTEST BLANKET WINNERS NAMED

ENTIRE TEAM PICKED BY ONLY 12

Twelve, instead of 10, All-America football blankets will be awarded in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's All-America football contest, the committee announced today.

Only 10 blankets were offered as prizes, but out of the thousands of entrants an even dozen guessed the makeup of the entire team, and it was decided it would be unfair to eliminate two of them, although the committee had this privilege under the rules, which gave it the power to reduce the field on a basis of reasons given for selecting the players named.

The winners include two sisters, the Misses Polly and Zenida Kane, of Carrick.

HERE THEY ARE—WINNERS

Forty-one contestants picked 10 of the 11 players. Many had nine, eight and seven. One entry had two lists of 10. Only one contestant failed to pick a single player named by the All-America Board.

Following are the lucky blanket winners:

David J. Davis, 64 Alexander street, Johnstown, Pa.
Richard H. O'Brien, 217 Washington avenue, Vendergrift, Pa.
Edward Vallor, 220 Hargrove street.
Anthony J. Polito, 37 Clay way.

Peter Shavor, 502 Heisel street, Homestead, Pa.
Edward H. Kuhns, 5527 Center avenue.
Walter W. McVay, 3222 Grant Building.
Miss Polly Kane, 2252 Valera street, Carrick.
Miss Zenida Kane, 2252 Valera street, Carrick.
Arthur Sykes, 707 Florida avenue, South Hills.

THESE HAD ON" WRONG

The contestants who had the satisfaction of guessing 10 of the 11 players were:

Harry Beckman, Jr., 728 Russell avenue, Johnstown, Pa.
William Haas, 937 South Braddock avnue, Wilkinsburg.
Joseph J. Rauscher, 336½ Twelfth avenue, Homestead, Pa.

Miss Virginia Stiles, 107 Sycamore street, Mt. Washington.
L. A. Stiles, 107 Sycamore street, Mt. Washington.

SKLADANY TOP CHOICE

Joe Skladany, of Pitt, was accorded more recognition than any other player. His name was found on about 98 of every 100 entries received.

Bernard, Michigan center; Warburton, University of Southern California quarterback; Corbus, Stanford guard, and Sauer, Nebraska fullback, were other extremely popular choices, their names being listed on at least 80 per cent of the ballots. Rosenberg ran well ahead of all other eligibles for the other guard position, with Schommel, of Iowa, recognized in the voting as his outstanding rival.

Smith, of Washington, end; Wistert, of Michigan, tackle, and Purvis, of Purdue, halfback, were the big stumbling blocks. At least 50 per cent of those competing in the contest named none of these stars, and scarcely more than 100 contestants placed all three on their teams.

The popular choice at end, next to Skladany, was Petosky, of Michigan, with Crawford, of Duke, polling the heaviest vote among the tackles, and Lund, of Minnesota, and Buckler, of Army, qualifying as the "people's choices" among the halfbacks. Lund received more votes than any other halfback, and, while Feathers ran well ahead of Purvis, he was rated a poor second to Buckler.

LOCAL STARS HONORED

Rado, of Duquesne; Sebastian, of Pitt; Burzio, of Carnegie Tech, and Weinstock, of Pitt, were local players who received much recognition.

A few entrants in the contest, probably prompted by civic pride, selected the entire Pitt backfield.

Three of those aiming to win All-America blankets gave indication that they regard the line as the "whole works" in football. They neglected to select a backfield.

The blankets now are being prepared by the company which manufactures them and will be shipped to the winners as soon as received. Each will bear the name of Joe Skladany as Pittsburgh's All-American of 1933.

ST. VINCENT'S HONORS TEAM

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 19.—James (Sleepy) Crowley, left halfback of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen and director of Fordham gridiron destinies, brought down a crowded house at the Penn Albert Hotel here last night as St. Vincent College banqueted her 1933 football heroes and paid tribute to Coach Gene Edwards, of the highly successful Bearcats. Listed as feature of an all-star speaking cast, the far-famed Crowley lived up in all respects to advance notices anent the wit and good sense of his discourses and sent a throng of some 400 players, alumni and guests upon its way rejoicing.

The former Irish ace followed such redoubtable post-prandial orators as Jim Marks, sage of Kiskiminetas; Father Michael O'Shea, of St. Peter's, North Side; Joe Bach, line coach at Duquesne and favored candidate for the Bluffite boss post soon to be vacated by Elmer Layden; Clarence Overend, Carnegie Tech's genial graduate manager of athletics; Don Harrison, director of Pitt athletics, and Wilbur (Fats) Henry, leader at Wash-Jeff, and reminisced most divertingly on South Bend days. Not the least of the Crowley efforts came after conclusion of the regular festivities, when, before an informal gathering downstairs, he reeled off his classic recollection of a Rockne pre-battle team talk.

The Rt. Rev. Alfred Koch, O. S. B., president at St. Vincent's, congratulated the squad and its coach, Father Bonaventure Reithmeier, O. S. B., offered invocation and Father Alcuin Tasch, O. S. B., served neatly as toastmaster. Coach Edwards thanked his proteges for an excellent season, gave them full credit for the Bearcat advance, and refused to concede that the Gold and Green victory over Davis-Elkins was an upset. Letters were awarded to the following 21 players:

At the speakers' table, in addition to those listed above, were the Rev. Jerome Rupprecht, O. S. B., retiring director of athletics, and Charles (Pinky) Martin, well known local grid official and the new sports head at Latrobe, while Graduate Manager John D. Holahan, of Duquesne; President Art Rooney, of the Pittsburgh Football Pirates; Dr. James Reeves president of Seton Hill College and a host of other notables, were seated nearby. The keynote of the affair was optimism. 'Twas freely predicted that the Saints are ready to step out seriously in a pigskin way. All in all the soiree soared to unquestionable height among the outstanding football fiestas of the year. No small measure of the party's lively spirit was contributed by the St. Vincent College Orchestra under the direction of the Rev. Raymond Balko, O. S. B.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Babe Ruth never will play in the minor leagues again . . . You can kick that around . . . When he is through as a player in the big leagues, he'll be through for all time, and he's beginning to prepare for the inevitable day when he'll have to hang up his togs . . . He said as much at the dinner he gave to members of his All-American Board of Baseball in New York the other night.

Babe plans to keep his hand in the game in some way . . . Right now he has arranged to do a series of radio broadcasts built around a Babe Ruth Boys' Club, and will conduct a contest along with it, the winners of which will go to the training camp of the Yankees with him in the spring . . . He told his listeners at the dinner that he doesn't want the kids to forget him, ever.

The Babe is going to be very busy this winter, what with making his broadcasts and in other ways preparing for his future . . . He had to decline an invitation to come here as the guest of the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America some time in January or February because he will not be able to spare the time.

Lefty Grove, Mickey Cochrane and Jimmy Foxx were present in uniform at the Babe's dinner, and Lefty got a lot of fun out of kidding Mickey, who will be the new manager of the Detroit Tigers, while Grove will be pitching for the Boston Red Sox . . . He told Mickey he'd be winding 'em around his neck next summer and Mickey came back with the crack that if he does he'll sic his Pitcher Hogsett on him . . . Hogsett appears to be one of Lefty's pet aversions.

A former Kittanning High School player will be in the lineup of the University of Miami when it tackles the Dukes in that Festival of the Palms game at Coral Gables, Fla., on New Year's Day . . . He is Gwynne Bierkamper, who played for Coach Katy Easterday a Kittanning, concluding his high school career in 1929 . . . He is an end . . . Max Elling, Pittsburgh's own Kingfish boxer, is back home from Syracuse, N. Y., where he had five fights in seven weeks, winning one by a knockout and three on decisions, and losing one . . . He is looking for bouts here, and, if they do not materialize, will return to Syracuse . . . Bill Nichy, North Side middleweight, is boxing out of Buffalo, and Frankie Goosby, Freddie Jenkins and Billy Brent, former local Negro boxers, are in Syracuse.—HARRY KECK.

MADDEN, FAY IN TOURNEY

Two more recruits had been added to the Pittsburgh delegation to the National Junior and Boys' Indoor tennis championships, beginning a week from today at the Seventh Regiment Tennis Club, New York. Following the recent announcement that Jimmy Arensberg, Shady Side Academy ace, would make the Gotham jaunt, it was learned today that Bob Madden, Pitt Freshman aspirant, and Bill Fay, Mount Lebanon High School luminary, will also carry P. T. A. colors in the event.

Arensberg plans to leave early this week for Boston, there to practice with his brother Wally, 1933 Harvard net leader, on the Longwood covered courts. Madden and Fay will motor to New York on Friday and will work out, 'tis hoped, on the Armory rectangles Saturday. All three local entrants have been keeping in trim at home as best they can and, between sessions indoors at the Pittsburgh Golf Club and on board gymnasium floors, should be reasonably well primed to acquit themselves nicely.

LIONS DEPART FOR COAST

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Columbia's football team has had its final home drill in preparation for the New Year's Day battle with Stanford in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena.

The squad of 30 players, five coaches, two trainers and the team manager will leave for the West this afternoon at 3:40 o'clock.

Butch to Box Sarron at Moose

Mose Butch and Petey Sarron have been matched to box the main bout of a show in the Moose Temple Christmas afternoon, with Anson Green meeting Walter Kirkwood, stablemate of Sarron, from Alexandria, Va., in another 10-rounder. Dominick Mancini will be a principal in one of three six-round preliminaries.

PITT BEATEN BY BUTLER

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—Butler University obtained revenge last night for the overtime basketball defeat handed it last year by the University of Pittsburgh by soundly trouncing the Panthers, 35 to 24.

Butler took a long lead in the first half, beat off a Pitt rally at the opening of the second period, and then coasted to victory as the Pitt attack became disorganized.

The Bulldogs led at the end of the half, 23 to 9, but shortly after the second period began Cribbs, Panther center, led a rally in which Pittsburgh rang up eight points before Butler could tally.

Ragged passing on the part of Pittsburgh handicapped their play throughout most of the game and it was only during the brief rally at the start of the last half that the Panthers were able to feed the ball to the man under the basket with any success.

The four field goals which Cribbs made in the last half enabled him to take high point honors for the Panthers. He scored nine points in all. Davis, Butler forward, was the high scorer of the game with three field goals and four free throws for a total of 10 points. The lineup:

PITT.	G.	F.	Pt.	BUTLER.	G.	F.	Pt.
W. Hughes, f.	1	2	4	Davis, f.	3	4	10

Londos to Meet Winner at Garden

Jim Londos, the champion, is going to appear soon in the Motor Square Garden ring, Promoter Dave Thompson announced today. He plans to show the winner of his Gino Garibaldi-Paul Jones bout, tomorrow night, against the famous Greek star.

Hans Kampfer, of Germany, and Floyd Marshall are in the semi-final. Hans Baur meets Little Beaver and Orville Brown is in with Ivan Vacturoff in the preliminaries.

Hogan Captures City Cue Title

By defeating Rafferty, 100 to 16, in a 24-inning match, L. Hogan annexed the city pocket billiard championship as the annual tournament was concluded at the Roosevelt parlors last night. Hogan finished with a record of six victories and one defeat.

The final standing of the players:

CARL HUBBELL, HELEN JACOBS POLL VICTORS

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The selection of Carl Owen Hubbell as the "man of the year" in all sports, marks the second time the honor has gone to a major league baseball star in the three-year history of this annual Associated Press poll. Pepper Martin ran away with the contest in 1931.

The southpaw ace of the New York Giants, who compiled the best record for pitching effectiveness in 17 years, was voted the outstanding man, amateur or professional, by a nation-wide jury of sports editors and writers. He received 36 votes out of a total of 207 in the final tabulation.

Jack Lovelock, track 26.
John Goodman, golf 15.
Fred Perry, tennis 15.
Bill Terry, baseball 8.
Glen Cunningham, track 8.
Barney Ross, boxing 6.
Jack Westrope, jockey 6.
Densmore Shute, golf 5.
Chuck Klein, baseball 5.

For her tennis achievements in saving the Wightman Cup for the United States with a deciding singles victory, and then dethroning her famous rival, Helen Wills Moody, for the American championship, Helen Hull Jacobs wins the acclaim of the nation's sports observers as the outstanding woman performer of 1933.

The results of voting in the third annual Associated Press poll show Miss Jacobs a decisive winner in a three-cornered race for the feminine honors of the year in all sports. She polled more than one-third of the votes, 64 out of a total of 180. Her nearest rivals were Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, the national golf champion, who finished second with 48 votes, and Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., new swimming queen, who was third with 31.

DEATH TAKES RED FLEMING

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 19.—The strong heart of Malcom D. (Red) Fleming, which had carried him to the very front rank of college football stars two decades ago, has failed. The former Wash-Jeff and Quantico Marine halfback luminary was found dead in his bed at his home in Bellwood, near here, yesterday.

Fleming's heyday was in 1912-13-14. Under the late Bob Folwell, he, Johnny Spiegel and Ralph D. Young, now of Detroit, and Russell Goodwin, of Wheeling, made football history for the Red and Black of Washington, Pa.

Probably the most memorable year for this quartet was in 1914. They defeated Yale for the second time in three years and lost only to Harvard by a score of 10-9.

Fleming was the Marty Brill and Earl Britton of his day. As Britton cleared the way for Red Grange 10 years later and Brill eased the path for Marchy Schwatz and Notre Dame in 1930, Fleming opened the gates for Young and Spiegel.

During the war "Red" joined the Marine Corps and helped make its Quantico Eleven one of the outstanding teams of the war period. Later he coached at Virginia Military Institute and was assistant coach for one year at W. and J.

Fleming was 44 years old last October 27. He was living with his family at Bellwood and had just obtained a job with the State Highway Department eight days ago. Funeral services will be held tomorow.

Marshall to Sue State Commission

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Everett Marshall, Colorado wrestler, is planning to file a $500,000 damage suit against the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission as a result of its action in suspending him pending an examination to determine whether or not he is sane.

The Pennsylvania commission suspended Marshall following a match with Jim Londos at Philadelphia Friday night. Suffering from what was described as a "mental relapse," the Coloradoan swung on the referee and others

PAIR IN TIE FOR CUE LEAD

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The battle for the world pocket billiards title today was a free-for-all, with half of the field of 10 players still in the running.

James Caras, the Wilmington, Del., youngster who won second money in the 1932 tournament, last night defeated Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, to go into a tie with the Philadelphian for first place, at six victories and two defeats. Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, and the rest of the Philadelphia delegation, Willie Mosconi and George Kelley, also had chances for at least a tie.

Claras trimmed Ponzi, 125 to 41 in 19 innings. In the afternoon, Ralph Greenleaf, winner of the last four tournaments, finished his schedule by losing to Mosconi, 125 to 55 in 22 innings.

Kelley will meet Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., tonight, while Benny Allen, Kansas City, and Pasquale Natalie, Chicago, were opposed in the afternoon match.

JOHNNY JAAP TO OPPOSE DONNELLI

By TOM BIRKS

With the much discussed Morgan-Rochester battle out of the way, soccer attention in the district again will be turned to Greenlee Field next Sunday afternoon to see one of the classics of the season, a battle between the Castle Shannon Rhiels and Curry and Buff Donnelli and Johnny Jaap.

The teams meet in the first round of the Western Pennsylvania challenge cup competition. Manager Bruce, of Curry, who was fortunate to get the luck of the draw for the first round games, secured the Bedford avenue enclosure for the game and a large crowd should be on hand for this meeting between two of the greatest soccer stars in the local firmament.

Waynesburg Pressed To Beat Fairmont

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Fairmont College bowed to Waynesburg in its opening basketball game last night, 40 to 30, after extending the visitors throughout the first half.

Janosik, center, led the Waynesburg scorers with 11 points. Mancuso, guard, was second highest with 9. Mason, forward, stood out for the losers, tallying 14 points, all but one of which were made in the initial half. The lineup:

RING RATINGS ANNOUNCED BY N. B. A.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Vince Dundee's ascendency to the top of the middleweight division and the abdication from this class to the light-heavyweight group by Lou Brouillard mark the major changes in the latest National Boxing Association ratings as announced by President Edward C. Foster, of Providence. Foster also is chairman of the Rhode Island Commission.

Brouillard headed the middleweight class in the September rankings, but since that time he lost the title to Dundee, and being unable to make the weight in this class, he has become a light-heavyweight. He is rated tenth in this division.

Kiski to Meet Mercersburg Teams

Kiski Prep School of Saltsburg, Pa., and Mercersburg Academy will open athletic relations in the spring, it was announced today by J. L. Marks, of Kiski.

The baseball teams will meet on May 12 and the football teams on November 10. A track meet also may be arranged. Both the baseball and football games next year will be staged at Mercersburg, teams visiting Saltsburg in 1935.

Miscellaneous Batting Records For Year in American League

Only three players received 100 or more bases on balls in the American League last season, the lowest number in years. Ruth was given free passage 114 times and Cochrane and Bishop 106 times each, the official figures announced today reveal.

Jimmy Dykes was hit with a pitched ball on 12 occasions, in which respect he was more than twice as unfortunate as Earl Averill, who was plunked five times.

As previously stated, Foxx led in runs driven in with 163; Gehrig, 139, was second; Simmons, 119, third, and Cronin, 118; Kuhel, 107; Campbell, 106; Gehringer, 105; Lazzeri, 104, and Ruth, 103, were the other players to bat in more than 100 runs.

Labor Eyes Weir's NRA Stand

THE BLUE EAGLE'S talons are not quite so sharp as they were. Rather, they are not being used so vigorously or viciously.

Not so long ago the fiat went forth from Washington that no "interpretation" whatsoever of the National Recovery Act would be tolerated in any code, and that no code could carry any modifying clause whatsoever regarding labor.

Mr. Forbes

Motor manufacturers immediately took note. They have a so-called "merit" clause concerning employes in their code. They got together and the sentiment was voiced emphatically that rather than drop this clause when their code expired at the end of this year, they would not renew the code.

YESTERDAY IT was announced that the automobile industry would be allowed to retain the desired clause in its code. And the industry, of course, consented to continue it. The proviso reads:

"Employers in this industry may exercise the right to select, retain or advance employes on the basis of individual merit, without regard to their membership or nonmembership in any organization."

The prospect now is that NRA and industry will contrive to get along more harmoniously. At the moment the chief bone of contention concerns collective bargaining by employes. The American Federation of Labor is striving extremely energetically to squash company unions and to bring about the "closed shop" in every establishment all over the land.

Today there are more members of company unions than there are members of the A. F. of L. But the latter is making very notable headway in swelling its ranks.

Both labor and employers are watching with intense interest the outcome of E. T. Weir's dispute with NRA over the method of voting by his steel workers on the kind of collective bargaining they shall adopt; in other words, whether the company union will be retained or affiliation be made with an outside union.

ON THE result much depends. Should this independently-minded steel manufacturer be licked, members of company unions in a number of other plants throughout the country doubtless would be encouraged to succumb to overtures by outside union representatives.

THE SECURITIES Act, it is daily proclaimed, has killed capital-raising by established corporations and has practically doomed investment banking.

Two youngish Western investment bankers, Charles Blyth, 50, and George Leib, 43, apparently think differently. Early in 1930 almost half Blyth and Company's stock was sold to Harrison Williams interests.

I learn that negotiations have just been concluded to repurchase every share by the active, operating executives of the firm.

It looks as if the West weren't quite as doleful as the East over the future of investment banking.

NO. 296.

AN ORDINANCE—Authorizing and directing the Mayor and the Director of the Department of Public Works, for and in behalf of the City of Pittsburgh, to execute a lease for the first floor of the South Side Market House, and prescribing the terms and conditions thereof.

SECTION 1—Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That the Mayor and the Director of the Department of Public Works, for and in behalf of the City of Pittsburgh, be and they are hereby authorized and directed to execute a lease to be for a term of one (1) year commencing January 1, 1934, with an option in said lessees of an additional term of one (1) year, as hereinafter set forth. The rental reserved shall be $1,000.00 per annum for the said term of one (1) year, payable in equal monthly installments of $83.34, on the first day of each month during said term.

Said lessees, in addition to the rental reserved, shall make such additions, alterations, improvements and repairs to said building as may be needed, all of which such additions, alterations, improvements and repairs shall be approved by the Director of the Department of Public Works in writing, and no repairs, additions, alterations or improvements shall be made until the same have been approved in writing by the Director of the Department of Public Works of the City of Pittsburgh.

Said lessees shall have the right and privilege to operate, supervise, control and manage said market house and the personnel thereof.

Said tenants shall have the right among themselves to determine what stalls or portions of said market each individual tenant shall occupy, and in case of the failure or death of a tenant or his desire to discontinue business, the remaining tenants, acting by a majority vote of the same, or through a committee appointed by them, shall have the right to substitute another tenant or tenants therefor, which substituted tenant or tenants shall be subject to all the obligations of the original lease.

Said tenants shall maintain as now provided a place for a farmers' market in said building.

Said lessees shall keep the demised premises, fixtures and equipment in adequate repair, and shall carry fire insurance upon the same in the sum of $25,000.00, in favor of the City of Pittsburgh and the lessees individually or collectively, as their respective interests may appear.

If during the original term of said lease or as extended the said market shall be damaged by fire or other calamity so as to substantially interfere with its being operated as a public market, the lessees may surrender said lease or may repair the market. While it is being repaired the rental shall be abated proportionately as said market may be usable.

The entire cost of the operations of said market house, including the furnishing of water, gas, electricity and the maintenance of said demised premises and equipment in good repair shall be paid by the lessees. Said lessees shall operate and maintain said market in a clean and sanitary manner as a public market, subject to the control of the Director of the Department of Public Works, who shall have the right, for cause stated, to determine whether said lessees are operating said market according to the terms of said lease and under the provisions of this ordinance, and his decision in writing thereon shall be final, conclusive and binding, unless an appeal from his decision shall be taken within (5) days thereafter to the Mayor, whose decision shall be final, conclusive and without appeal.

All repairs to said market house by the tenants during the term of the lease shall inure to the benefit of the City of Pittsburgh, and there shall be no abatement of the rent for any repairs so made.

In case the lessees desire to exercise the option for an additional term of one (1) year, notice in writing shall be given to the Director of the Department of Public Works not later than the first day of November, 1934.

During the term of this lease the said lessees shall have the right to add as additional lessees other persons who may become stall holders in said market, provided said additional stall holders shall sign said lease and become liable under the terms and conditions thereof.

Such other clauses as may be deemed by the Director of the Department of Public Works and the City Solicitor necessary to protect the city and to carry out the intent of this ordinance may be written into said lease.

SECTION 2—That any ordinance or part of ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance.

Passed in Council December 11, 1933.
Approved December 14, 1933.
JOHN S. HERRON,
Mayor.

Recorded in O. B. Vol. 45, page 424.

NO. 297

AN ORDINANCE—Providing for the cancellation of certain leases between the City of Pittsburgh and the Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society; providing for the final payment of rental due from the City of Pittsburgh to the Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society and making an appropriation to pay the same.

WHEREAS, Pursuant to ordinance of the City of Pittsburgh, dated March 3, 1886, and recorded in Ordinance Book, Vol. 5, Page 423, the City of Pittsburgh leased to the Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society property of the City of Pittsburgh located and lying between Duquesne way and the low water line and eastwardly from the Union Bridge to Short street, for the term of fifty (50) years; and,

WHEREAS, Pursuant to ordinance of the City of Pittsburgh, approved July 11, 1919, and recorded in Ordinance Book, Vol. 30, Page 586, another lease for the aforementioned property was authorized to be made to the Western Pennsylvania Exposition

STOCK TRADERS REMAIN IN SHELTERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Dreary dullness burdened financial markets today as most traders remained in speculative bomb-proof shelters waiting for an incentive to either advance or retreat.

The domestic gold rate held at yesterday's advanced figure of $34.06 an ounce and the dollar rallied moderately in terms of leading foreign exchanges. Grains, cotton and other commodities were inclined to mark time, while bonds were quiet and mildly mixed. Although there was no pronounced pressure on equities generally, sliding tendencies were seen in some of the leaders. Trading in the early hours was the slowest of the past week or so. A number of stocks were moderately higher at one time.

Shares of Chrysler, United States Steel, Vanadium, McIntyre, Montgomery Ward, J. C. Penney, Santa Fe and General Motors were slightly improved. The erratic Atlas Tack was about unchanged, as were N. Y. Central, Anaconda and many others. Losers of fractions to around a point included American Telephone, Union Pacific, Auburn, Standard Oil of New Jersey, National Distillers, Union Bag & Paper, Johns-Manville, Allied Chemical, United States Smelting, Westinghouse and Western Union.

Heaviness of various equities recently was attributed by some commission houses partly to profit tax selling as well as selling to establish losses. In the former category, it was said, there were traders and investors who have held stocks since the beginning of the upturn last spring. Many of these issues still show sizeable profits. Quite a few of those who fear there may be a drastic increase in surtaxes next year are understood to have been liquidating their holdings so that their profits will come in their 1933 returns.

Although there has not been any unusual tax selling for either profits or losses reported, utility stocks were said by brokers to have been in the latter class during the past several days. The reason for the utility offerings, it was explained, was that the average for this group is now only about 5 points above the low of the year and those who acquired these stocks in the summer are able to show some sizeable declines.

Wall street sentiment continued to display a moderately optimistic tinge, despite the intermittent selling flurries. The fact that the gold price-fixing policy, with its theoretical dollar depreciation results, has been somewhat obscured by news regarding improvement in business and industdy throughout the nation was viewed as a hopeful factor by most market observers.

Some financial quarters were inclined to worry a bit over the forthcoming session of Congress with federal regulation of stock and commodity exchanges a possibility. That the Stock Exchange and the New York Attorney General's office were investigating the gyrations of Atlas Tack, which dropped about 18 points in two days, it was felt, might furnish fresh fuel for congressional fires.

Waynesburg Bank In National Group

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Dec. 19.—Announcement was made that the Union Trust Company of Waynesburg, a state bank and a member of the Mellbank group, has been made a national bank and will hereafter be known as the Union National Bank of Waynesburg. The change was made, the announcement stated, to give depositors benefit of recent national legislation guaranteeing deposits.

Boards Ask Silk Trade Wage Survey

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The National Labor Board has requested a wage survey in the silk and rayon industry, Senator Wagner, Labor Board chairman, announced. He explains that is the "next step" in the efforts which the board began during the strike in New Jersey and New England silk mills to settle wage disputes in the industry.

Dividend News

Howe Sound Raised.

Howe Sound Company, copper mining concern, raised the quarterly dividend to 75 cents from the 25 cents paid in previous quarters. The distribution is payable December 30 to record of December 29. The board reported that "earnings for the quarter with December estimated are satisfactory, due in part to favorable exchange rates and to a lesser degree to inventory sales." The company announced that it would hereafter make all dividends when declared payable at the end of each quarter.

TRADE SWINGS TO 'NEW DEAL' STANDARDS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Business men and financiers, as the year approaches a close, are at length recognizing the importance of adjusting their operations to the changed standards set up by the "New Deal."

Mr. Rukeyser

President Roosevelt's economic policies have been consciously designed to give a knockout blow to "rugged individualism." The effort has been to find a technique for translating into human benefits the potentialities of America's improved technology under the power age.

The new program is also a protest against what has been described as the pre-depression "period of money-grabbing anarchy."

Referring to the new outlook, Howard Lee McBain, dean of Columbia University graduate faculties, has pointed out:

"We must live together; we have no alternative. And in that collective living it is more and more manifest that, as a result of many factors, we must be increasingly guided, compelled, restrained, controlled. We are only facing the new and somewhat difficult task of receiving, not for all time, of course, but for the immediate future, that long-standing contest between individualism and collectivism, nationalism and internationalism."

With the apparent design of testing the administration's thesis that a rise in commodity prices is desirable as a means of economic recovery, the bulletin of the New York Stock Exchange presents a series of statistical graphs which purport to show improvement in Italian conditions since the middle of 1932, despite a continued recession in commodity prices. Italy has experienced a pickup in security prices, exchange position of the lira, industrial production, and international trade. The bulletin allures to the fact that in numerous past recoveries commodity prices continued to decline for a time. In this country, industrial production perked up after the first post-war depression in 1921 about six months before commodity prices reversed their downward trend.

To avoid these technical paradoxes, it is helpful to think of our present problem of recovery in terms of human beings. The returning of the idle and the under-compensated to gainful employment is the objective. Monetary manipulation and price changes are at best only partial approaches to the desired end. The importance of prices in this process centers around disparities within the price structure. It is especially desirable to bring farm prices into more harmonious relationship with industrial prices, so that the nine million workers on the farms can exchange the products of 300 days of work a year with the result of 300 days of labor on the part of the urban toiler.

YULE BUYING 18% OVER '32

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The National Retail Dry Goods Association reports that a survey of widely scattered "key" cities showed an 18 per cent increase in shopping for the first two weeks in December over the same period in 1932.

The poll of department stores, the association said, showed increases ranged up as high as 38 per cent, in Miami.

The association said the Christmas shopping is progressing at an "accelerated and highly encouraging pace."

Other cities reporting shopping increases for the period were: San Francisco, Nashville, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Little Rock, Cincinnati, Seattle, Phoenix, Denver, Detroit, Chicago, Charleston, W. Va., Philadelphia, Kansas City, Atlanta, Indianapolis and Boston.

Daily Oil Output Up 22,690 Barrels

TULSA, Dec. 19.—Daily average production of crude oil in the United States during the week ended December 16 totaled 2,413,578 barrels, an increase of 22,690 barrels over the preceding week, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

Relief Corporation To Purchase Cattle

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Harry L. Hopkins, president of the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation, announces that bids will be opened here December 22 for purchase and processing of cattle, to supply the corporation with canned beef for the needy and unemployed.

TRADE DECLINE BELIEVED CHECKED

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, N. Y. University

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—The past week's business news makes it clear the declining trend of recent months has been checked. The returns are rather mixed, but one may say that at least a stable condition has been restored. In fact a number of indexes appear to point upward, although it is not yet clear whether the gains are more than seasonal.

Certain "sentiment" is more optimistic, notably in parts of the South and West.

U. S. SPENDING HELPS

I am inclined to think that probably we will see some gains in business activity during the next few months. These will be "stimulated" by government spending.

The Government is undertaking to "prime the pump" to a greater extent than ever before. Of course this means that business is not proceeding under its own steam and some may question the final results.

For the present, however, many are going to hope that once started up again, business will take hold and be able to get going on its own.

The careful observer will remember that we have tried stimulating business before, and will be a bit cautious about assuming that we are out of the woods. I advise caution in making long-run plans until we see how business develops in the spring and find out what Congress is going to do.

AUTO BUYING GOOD

Among the immediately favorable symptoms, we find the following: Steel production has spurted and steel scrap is higher in price. Automobile buying has been good for the season and the producers profess optimism concerning next year.

Stocks of finished goods have been reduced, relieving some of the surpluses accumulated during the summer spurt.

Doubtless the resumption of the liquor business is increasing the volume of legitimate business, somewhat as the introduction of any new product would.

At the moment, conditions abroad seem more settled, and France does not seem likely to be forced off the gold standard.

PRIMARY STOCKS JUMP

Stocks of some primary products have increased, such as zinc, copper and lead.

As would be expected when so much of the buying is stimulated by government lending and spending, the public debt is growing rapidly and the budget is not balanced.

Uncertainty as to money, taxes and government regulations does not help.

Finally, I note that most commodity markets were lower last week. Of course, this may merely represent a little slump in speculative sentiment.

BANK GUARANTY PLANS RUSHED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Walter J. Cummings last night announced completion of the examination of 7,204 state banks, non-members of the Federal Reserve system, which have applied for membership in the deposit insurance fund.

Cummings, chairman of the Insurance Corporation, said examining forces were in 53 additional non-member banks whose applications for membership had been received since December 15.

OPERATOR 13

That made her laugh, and she felt better. Indeed, she was glad to go, knowing well enough that nobody in authority in New York City would save John Gailliard unless she did. She still had authority from Col. Sharpe to drive him into Canada. If she could only get hold of him again, she'd do it.

As she was on the point of leaving the station house a detective named Kelso, and McTaggart, a policeman in plain clothes, came in from the Central Office. They had just encountered a battalion of ex-service men. The troops were leaving the Seventh Regiment Armory and marching eastward, they said, and they offered to help her find them.

Into Trouble

So Operator 13 went off with them through the deserted, smoky streets, lurid with the red glare of the western sun. From every direction came the distant roaring of murdering mobs and the rattle of pistol fire and musketry.

And about 6 o'clock they found the battalion they were looking for—but it was the wrong regiment and in the wrong quarter of the city—a sinister district on Eighteenth street near First avenue.

The girl and her policemen were involved in trouble before they could extricate themselves; the soldiers and two howitzers were firing into a dense mob which fired back at them; and from windows and roof tops on both sides of the street ambushed ruffians hurled down bricks and paving blocks upon the troops. The mob numbered thousands; the troops, under Cols. Winslow and Jardine, 150.

Ten rapid rounds of grape and canister from Jardine's guns tore lanes through the massed mob two blocks long. The slaughter was horrible. But the troops were being overwhelmed by the terrible rain of missiles from the housetops. Col. Jardine fell; every tenth man of the command was down and others were dropping fast when the decimated command began its retreat.

Indiscreet Wrath

Detective Kelso was hurt, but both he and Policeman McTaggart managed to keep on their feet and shoulder a way into Nineteenth street with Operator 13 between them. There were two bullets holes in her skirt, and a razor-edged sheet of slate had sheared the hat from her head, nicking her neck and left ear enough to cover her face and throat with blood.

This had infuriated her and she had mounted a stoop and emptied her pistol at the dodging shapes on the roofs silhouetted against the western sky. And here, no doubt, the mob would have caught and murdered her, had not her faithful policemen seized her and hustled her off in the retreating column.

On the way downtown to the central office they were met by Inspector Leonard with a hundred policemen, who escorted what remained of the battalion to Mulberry street. And it was there, outside the police and military cordon guarding citizen refugees, white and black, that the girl saw Capt. Helme, of the Cedar street station, who told her that Col. Nevers' regiment was marching to intercept the mob threatening to destroy the iron-clad and that Commissioner Acton expected her to go with that command.

At 9 o'clock at night they found it by the crash and glare of its volley firing and the flaring torches of the mob. It was a disciplined mob, about 1,000 strong, armed with new muskets, firing by platoons into Nevers' regiment.

And instantly, through the infernal flame of the torches, the girl saw John Gailliard, in full Confederate uniform. And she almost screamed at sight of him, his horse, firing at the troops and urging his men to the charge.

"Damn you!" she shouted. "Drive those troops back and get on to the ironclad. That's why you're here!"

But already, in Nevers' regiment, bugles were sounding the charge and the troops, cheering, dropped their bayonets to a glittering level and plunged ahead, sweeping the girl with them almost under the hoofs of John Gailliard's plunging horse.

She caught his stirrup, climbed like a wildcat to his saddle, and, as he twisted around to shoot her, she clasped him around the body; and he recognized her.

The horse, pricked by a bayonet, reared and kicked himself onto the sidewalk, pirouetted on hind legs and tore into the melee, bolting through the disordered ranks into Greenwich street. And in the saddle reeled John Gailliard, striving to check and control the maddened animal, while a white-faced girl clung desperately to his swaying body.

A Crash

John Gailliard rolled over and over until a shattered railing stopped him; and he scrambled to his feet and staggered back to where Operator 13 lay with her right leg under the dead horse, trying to free herself.

"Is your leg broken?" he demanded as she looked up at him in the wavering gaslight, ragged, bleeding and dishevelled.

"My leg isn't broken," she gasped, "but my heart is. Take me under the shoulders and pull, please."

He managed to drag her free of the dead creature.

Greenwich street was deserted and silent in the dim gaslight. There had been a battle there; empty, looted shops, stores and dwellings gasped wide open. A dead sergeant of cavalry lay on the sidewalk, still clutching a revolver. Scores of corpses were scattered in the street.

The girl wiped her dirty face with a dirtier handkerchief. "I suppose," she said tremulously, "you won't consider yourself my prisoner."

He stared at her; went over and searched her; and found her to be unarmed.

"Well, then," she said wearily, "what are you going to do?"

"Come into one of those empty houses," he said coolly. "If your police find us here they'll shoot us both."

He took her arm and they mounted the steps of one of those old Dutch houses on Charlton street and went in at the open door. A gas jet in the hallway was still burning. The whole interior of the house had been looted.

"I suppose," she said, "you are going to knock me senseless and escape. You've done it once before."

He reddened. "I am going to escape," he said quietly.

U. S. RATIFIES TREATY ENDING SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR

One underlying cause of the Spanish-American War was the failure of the oppressive Spanish colonial government to protect legitimate interests of American investors in Cuba. The war was fought upon and around Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands in the Far East; it was terminated by the Treaty of Paris (Dec. 10, 1898). Spain withdrew from Cuba, ceded Porto Rico, Guam and the Philippine Islands to the United States, which paid $20,000,000.

It was now the duty of the United States to decide upon the future of the former Spanish colonies for the best of their peoples.

CHORDATA—13TH ANIMAL PHYLUM (About 60,000 Species)

ABDUCTION OF REBECCA BY BOIS GUILBERT

This abduction forms an interesting chapter of Ivanhoe, brilliant tale by Walter Scott (1771-1832). Brave Ivanhoe's love for Rowena, ward of his father Cedric, causes his disinheritance. A hero of the Crusade of King Richard I, Ivanhoe returns in disguise from the Holy Land. In a tournament he is crowned victor by Rowena. Wounded, he retires to his friend, Isaac, whose daughter Rebecca nurses him. Rowena is imprisoned by a suitor, De Bracy.

Rebecca, though infatuated with the knight, offers her wealth for the freedom of Rowena. She is liberated and married to Ivanhoe through efforts of King Richard, the "Black Knight," also back from Palestine.

Rebecca, spurning the Templar Bois Guilbert, is abducted and accused by him of sorcery. Condemned to the stake, she wins trial by combat. Ivanhoe is her champion. She is declared innocent.

Other interesting characters: Robin Hood, Gurth the swineherd, Wamba the jester, Friar Tuck and Ulrica, the witch, who perishes in the flames of the castle she set afire. (English Literature)

VICTOR EMMANUEL II RECEIVING VOTE RESULT

Italy's independent principalities fought a long struggle for unification. They won the friendship of France in the Crimean War (1854) as allies; they were helped by France against Austria in 1859; as allies of Prussia in 1866 (Prussian-Austrian War) they again gained territory from Austria. When the French troops left Rome at the start of the Franco-Prussian War (1870), a popular vote completed the unification of Italy under King Victor Emmanuel II. (World History)

ALUMINUM BY ELECTROLYSIS

Aluminum (Al), soft, light metal, is, after O and Si, the most abundant element; it is found mostly as silicate: feldspar, clay. C. M. Hall invented the process (1886) to produce almost pure aluminum by electrolyzing alumina (Al_2O_3) in fused bath of cryolite ($AlNa_3F_6$) in above cell. It consists of an iron shell with fire brick lining, inside which is carbon lining as cathode. Anodes are graphite made of petroleum coke. Alumina is prepared from bauxite (hydrated aluminum oxides mixed with hydrated iron oxides) by treating it with caustic soda, then with little aluminum hydroxide; the precipitated hydroxide is converted into alumina by heating.

Money Ain't Everything

But why be envious just because she inherited fifty million without a contest? What do you do with all that money? The girls generally marry some European duke who can't tell his head from his back collar button.

Pearls, diamonds, silks, furs and caviar. What are they compared with the drayman's humble cottage? Don't write on both sides of the paper.

Let's take society. We've been in it. Conversation is so shallow you figure the folks must have gone to college in a saucer. Everything is more artificial than a crooner singing bass. The more pleased they are to see you the less you are welcome. After they shake hands you know why a farmer puts on his mittens before he grabs a pumphandle in December. The politeness is merely cellophane on sarcasm. Even the butlers get that way.

We wrestled with a butler who had stayed too long in society. As he kicked us through the palatial doorway he said, "Sorry to inconvenience you. Not putting you out, am I?"

Take the money angle. Nobody worries until they have something to worry about. How about inflation, deflation and reflation? One day your banker telephones that the government, state and city taxes have gulped the morsels and the lawyers are making crumb cake of the rest. After that, where are your pals? They don't come around any more. They think there is a wolf trap on your doormat.

Yessir, never holler about not being rich. It is better to be in medium circumstances than well done. Sleep with all the windows and doors open. Never worry about pickpockets and brokers. Life ain't much more than three squares a day and a flop. Meals and a place to flatten your ear.

When you are young you dream that some day you will be blackjacked by a fairy godmother into sudden opulence. After you get around 50 you stop all that. You know the mice in your kitchen were never six white beautiful hosses.

And, by the way, that butler never sent us our coat and hat.

An Intelligence Test

Republican Leadership Will Be Judged By the Senate's Action On Social Legislation.

No intelligent person can have failed to perceive that the people are demanding legislation that will improve the condition of the poor, the unfortunate, the downtrodden.

Yet some of the Republican leaders continue to act as if they were entirely unaware of a change in the citizens' temper. They act as if we were still in the midst of the Coolidge boom, as if everybody were still prosperous and contented, and there were no need to alter the existing order.

The present leaders of the G. O. P. in Pennsylvania have never been noted for shrewdness. Republican victories in the state since they took charge of the organization have been due to the fact that a wave of Republicanism was sweeping the country, and not to the ability of their leadership.

Recent developments have indicated, indeed, that the leaders of the State Republican Organization are downright stupid. Certainly it is difficult to account otherwise for their defiance of public sentiment as revealed in their apparent reluctance to correct the social conditions that contributed to the Democratic triumphs in Pennsylvania last year and last month.

A test of their intelligence will be provided by the action of the State Senate on the pending social legislation. The Senate does the Republican Organization's bidding.

The expectation is in some quarters that the Senate will kill, by burial in committee, the housing legislation, minimum wage bills, child labor and coal and iron police bills passed by the House. The Senate thus "pickled" legislation of this character at the last regular session; and notwithstanding that the people rebuked the Republican Organization in the next election there is reason to believe the same course will be attempted.

If the Republican leaders think the party can escape blame if these important and eagerly desired humanitarian bills are buried in Senate committees instead of being openly voted upon, they are wofully underestimating the intelligence of the voters.

Drinking Should Be Confined to Reputable Hotels and Restaurants

About three months ago a bit of dialogue appeared in the newspapers.

Said Mr. A:

"If 36 states vote for repeal, we will have wines and liquors by Christmas."

Said Mr. B:

"Yes, and if 36 states vote against repeal, we will have wines and liquors just the same."

There were more speakeasies than there ever had been saloons in the history of the country.

There was more hard liquor, but also more bad liquor.

The only change in drinking which the end of prohibition will bring about will be less wood alcohol, fewer poisonous beverages, and in their place better alcoholic concoctions and more harmless ones.

Another change, if we are wise, will be the abolition of the speakeasy, and the confining of public drinking to decent places which will not permit excessive drinking or indecent behavior.

If we are wise, whatever drinking is done will be done in reputable hotels and restaurants, and there will be no demand for the disreputable speakeasy, because there will be no need for it.

The end of prohibition will mean, then, good drinks and less harmful drinks, and more decent drinking places, and more decent behavior.

It will mean the end of the lawless unregulated speakeasy, and the substitution of the law-abiding hotel and restaurant, which will be properly supervised and regulated by the state.

Moderation in drinking, true temperance, was making great progress in the United States before prohibition came in; and while we have wasted 14 years and probably gone back a good deal during those 14 years as regards temperance, we can all begin again to promote temperance and encourage moderation and substitute moral suasion and common sense for the futile attempt to make people moral and sensible by government proclamation and brute force.

We have been a very intemperate people during prohibition. We now should become a moderate temperate people again.

And as a long step towards that end we should substitute wholesome drinks for harmful drinks and decent dispensaries, like hotels and restaurants, for the disreputable speakeasy.

An Opportunity to Save

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith Supports the Building Owners' and Managers' Contention.

For several years the Building Owners' and Managers' Association and the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board have pointed out annually that the expenses of the city could be reduced appreciably by applying to the upkeep of the public buildings the same business standards that obtain in the maintenance of commercial buildings.

Now comes Mrs. R. Templeton Smith with corroboratory evidence. Mrs. Smith says the budget for the Bureau of City Property could be cut 47 per cent without loss of efficiency, and tells in detail how it can be done.

As the official representative of Mayor-elect W. N. McNair in the budget proceedings, Mrs. Smith's recommendations may receive greater consideration than was given to the building owners' advice.

It is to be hoped so; for the saving that could be effected is not to be disdained.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—It's now 30 years that Tom Noonan has been ministering to the misery of a great city unwashed in Doyers street. Depression there is not of the moment but perpetual. To this Cathedral of the Underworld, once a Chinese theater, 5,000,000 have drifted.

Nightly the queue forms and shuffles in. Then is fed and bedded on bleak pine flooring. Set ketwise in a turn of the slums, the rescue mission catches forlorn spawnings—the lost, beaten and wandering. Ashes of dead fires!

In the dim-lit blur they appear so many ghosts in a hollow. Flat figures scissored from black paper. The only radiance is the wit and human understanding of Noonan, styled the Bishop of Chinatown. His phrasings are rough-hewn but sparkling. He knows the down and outer for he has been one.

It's interesting to watch the eddying of human wreckage. The minute they cross the threshold there is a sudden shine of content. To most people the interior is depressing, smelling dankly of lysol. But to outcasts it appears a beautiful anti-room to paradise.

One of the spryest seasonal visitors to Gotham is Mrs. Irvin Cobb's father, Marcus S. Baker, 83 years old. He has held high municipal office in his native Savannah, Ga., for more than 20 years, because his popularity is such no one will run against him. An octogenarian, he looks no more than 60, attends a movie daily and so eager is his gusto for life that in New York he is not even bored by the rounds of teas.

* * *

The popularity of Harlem's night life was not due to a slumming discovery. It did not, Topsy-like, "just grow." The man who sounded the bolero in the Black Belt jungles was Lee Posner, Broadway theatrical press agent. During a jobless stretch, he induced cabaret owners to raise a fund for publicity. This attracted groups of those surfeited with downtown boredom. They discovered Florence Mills, the scat singers, snake hip contortionists and the up-town low-downers which had flourished for years. But hitherto had enjoyed only local patronage.

One of the most beautiful estates in the nearby Jersey environs is that of the late Dwight Morrow in a woodland sweep of Englewood's fringes. Here Col. Lindbergh was married. The Morrow manor is colonial white with green shutters, reached by a rambling roadway through a murmurous forest. A brick-pillared entrance to the estate coils with wine-red creepers at which a guard constantly stands. Once the Morrow estate was accessible to the public. But no more, since the terrible tragedy to a member of the household.

Of all estate names, the most appropriate to my notion is "Planting Fields," the Long Island home of W. R. Coe. His seasonal planting of flowers is the largest of its sort in America. Corey Ford's retreat in Vermont is dubbed "Stoney Broke," and Harry Action's at Flushing, "Mortgage Manor." But the most hilarious was Herb Roth's jerrybuilt lean-to in a scrubby section of Brooklyn during his struggling-up days and called "Dandruff on the Knob."

* * *

And there is Lincoln Steffen's seagirt residence in the writers' colony at Carmel. It is "The Getaway."

Charlie Journal, likely best known of silken rope greeters of Broadway's elite, took up his stand a month or so ago at Montmartre, the once satiny haunt of Joan Sawyer. In that era it was by far the toniest of the after-theater clubs, and Journal the arbiter of its social distinctions. To receive Journal's familiar nod and a ringside table were tantamount in the White Way index to a Page One headline that you belonged. In the Montmartre of other days an occasional visitor was Lee Shubert, who came alone, sat aloofly and watched the dancers while sipping a mineral water. It was the only night club I ever saw David Belasco attend, too. He tugged at his forelock awhile in utter abstraction, suddenly glanced about the room and quickly departed. It was quite an act.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Are You Afraid of People?

Self-conscious? Afraid to meet strangers? Never know what to do or say?

Yes, I know how it is. I'm thinking back thirty, forty years, to a girl who was like that—a clumsy, frightened country girl, "one of the Robinson kids." And I'm feeling yet the numbness of despair that swept over me whenever I was "out in company." The suddenly clammy hands—the big, gangly feet—the jagged sob that wedged in my throat as the lonely hours crept along.

How dreadful it was to be left out! If I could only be like other people—like the other girls who were having such a heavenly time, laughing, chatting, flirting with miraculous ease. But of course I was different. I could never be like the rest of them. Just a big, clumsy, old stick-in-the-mud, that's what I was.

Oh, golly! I wished I could die. Maybe if I could die right off bang, then everybody would be sorry for me and ashamed because they hadn't realized how nice I was.

Foolish, frightened little girl, sitting off alone in a corner—how many of you there are! Lonely, bewildered, self-conscious folk sitting in corners all over the world, wishing they could "have a good time like other people."

And if they but knew it, they could end their misery in a second, for the source of it lies in their own muddled brains and aching hearts.

Why are we "self-conscious?"

We're self-conscious because we're conscious of Self. Now, it's all very well to be conscious of Self if you have the right slant on your Self—but most self-conscious people haven't. For they believe that their Self is different from all other Selves. They believe that they have hurts and handicaps unknown to normal people.

Why do they believe this? Partly because they're afraid; partly because they're conceited. Even though it makes us miserable, it flatters our egotism to think we're different. But the consequences are tragic. For, as a result of this belief, self-conscious people build a wall about themselves. They feel that they can never be like other people—that they can never be understood, never speak a common language.

Which is, of course, entirely pop-eyed. For none of us is "different." Even geniuses aren't different. Beneath our surface talents or peculiarities, we are all-of-apiece. We are all frightened, lonely, muddled, silly, excitable, irritable home-saps, craving love and fun, admiration and power.

These pleasant, popular people, who seem to take life and each other so easily are exactly like the miserable, self-conscious folk. They, too, are wondering what it's all about. They, too, feel that no one understands them. They, too, are haunted by unsatisfied dreams, undigested humiliations.

BUT THEY HAVE LEARNED ONE GREAT TRUTH. THEY HAVE LEARNED NOT TO TAKE THEMSELVES OR THEIR TROUBLES TOO SERIOUSLY, BECAUSE THEY KNOW THAT EVERYONE ELSE IS IN THE SAME BOAT.

And so there is no wall about such people. You can go and come in their spirits, as you would go and come in a well-known room. You are at home with them, for exactly the same reason that you would be at home in that room. You recognize the same old furniture that you also possess, the same walls, the foolish knick-knacks.

Why are some people popular? That's why. They, too, are self-conscious, but they are conscious of self in a healthy way. They know that all Selves are essentially alike—that there are no walls between us—that we all speak the same language.

IF YOU WOULD ACCEPT THAT FACT—
IF YOU WOULD FORGET YOURSELF FOR A WHILE—
AND TAKE A CHANCE WITH THE OTHER FELLOW—
AND TALK TO HIM AS IF YOU WERE TALKING TO YOURSELF—
AND TREAT HIM AS YOU'D LIKE TO BE TREATED—
THEN ALL YOUR MISERIES OF SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS WOULD BE OVER.
TRY IT!

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

You Can't Delete Marriage

Every now and then somebody gets up on the platform and suggests the abolition of the ancient institution of marriage.

* * *

It is easy to understand why a MAN should want to "junk" the ties that bind. He has been told that Heaven is a place where there is no marrying or giving in marriage; and he sees before him a glamorous vision of eternal bachelorhood, eternal freedom and eternal romantic adventure.

All the privileges and joys of domesticity and companionship—and none of its responsibilities, ties or duties! Just one long, sweet dream of love, with a change of heart every few years or months—or, possibly, weeks!

* * *

But when a WOMAN advocates junking matrimony, as has happened more than once, I feel like calling in a psychoanalist and finding out what complex inspires her to ask her sex to throw away its last card and cut its own throat.

* * *

There is one consoling thought, however—and that is that so long as men are men and women are women, you can't JUNK MARRIAGE. The human instinct to want and to seek a life-mate is as strong and indestructible as the human instinct to want and to see a deity.

* * *

Why should anybody wish to abolish marriage, anyhow? Marriage, today, is not the old cast-iron "slavery" that it was in Grandmother's time. It is free and flexible, and comes in so many assorted varieties and flavors that everybody can choose his or her own brand. It isn't poured into any one conventional mold.

* * *

You don't have to model your married life, these days, to please the Ladies' Aid Society. You can please YOURSELF. You can take your marriage "straight" and old-fashioned and domestic, with children and domesticity and servant problems—or you can take it modern, with separate jobs and separate studio apartments and separate amusements.

* * *

But the point is that marriage can't be junked or abolished—because what every human being needs more than anything else in the world is a life companion of the opposite sex.

* * *

Every normal woman is at heart a one-man woman—and she wants to be MARRIED to that man, not just parked in his affections for a limited time. And no man's life is complete without a mate.

Men may change, women may change, the world may change, and even the marriage laws may change. But human beings will go right on mating. And marriage, itself, will always remain intrinsically what it is now and has been from the beginning of time—a life partnership, a life job or a life sentence—according to how you view it.

* * *

You can junk Victorianism, you can junk all the old conventions—but you can't junk anything so humanly instinctive as marriage!

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

Yes, it is unfortunate if you and your life partner do not enjoy the same sort of amusement and recreation, but this should not give you license to spend most of your time at leisure engaged in the sport you favor.

You should have chosen a partner with similar tastes and desires or be willing and cheerful over a 50-50 arrangement.

It is unfair to resolve that nothing shall interfere with the hours you choose to spend in your particular sport.

It is not a square deal to insist that your partner adopt your plans and favorite ways of spending time.

How would you like to conform entirely to your partner's tastes?

Too often young married folk are selfish that way.

The happy combination is that in which each finding that the other cannot relish to the same extent certain lines of sport or amusement enjoyed by himself, follows the Golden Rule cheerfully and does as he or she would be done by.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Chinese Slippers

The slippers are satin, of blue as dark
As the darkest skies at night,
With a pattern embroidered in lotus buds
And golden birds in flight.

They are heelless and quaintly devoid of shape,
But they must be endowed, I find,
With magical powers, for they carry me off
And away as on wings of the wind.

When I thrust my feet in these satin shoes,
With their birds and their lotus buds,
I can glimpse, in fancy, the tallow trees
That grow by the Yangste floods.

I can hear the song of the nightingale
That soars from the willow hedge
To see the lotus buds adrift
On the pool at the temple's edge.

O, fingers somewhere across wide seas,
That fashioned this gay design,
Can it be you have snared me in jade-green threads,
That you waken these dreams of mine?

Human Side of the News

Unrest in Cuba May Lead to American Intervention —Lyman, of the Marines

By Edwin C. Hill

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE CAFFERY succeeded Assistant Secretary of State Welles as our Amabassador to troubled Cuba. It has been no special secret that Sumner Welles could scare up no enthusiasm for the present radical government now in power at Havana. Nobody knows yet what particular slant Ambassador Caffery will take, but it is perfectly plain that the situation in Cuba is not very far from anarchy.

Reports that come to this writer, in private letters as well as from news dispatches, indicate that business is almost completely paralyzed; that tax revenues have melted away and that throughout the island is a general feeling of hopelessness. It seems only a question of time when the United States may have to step in. Some of these days—and the flash may come at any hour, depending on how much violence is left in the Cuban cosmos—we probably will read those familiar words:

"The Marines have landed and the situation is well in hand."

If and when they do land, the man who is very likely to be marching at their head is that fine sea-soldier Gen. Charles H. Lyman, now commanding at the Marine Barricks at Quantico, Va. Anarchy and the General don't get along very well together. It was he who cleaned up Santo Domingo so thoroughly that not a single bandit has waved a machete for nine years, and he capped the whole striking performance by an act of individual, personal bravery that is hard to match in our military annals.

* * *

Lyman's Adventure With Bandit Chief

ALONG about 1922 the island of Santo Domingo was completely over-run by robber gangs. These bandits devastated the land. It was impossible for estate owners, sugar growers and cattle ranchers to live on their properties and carry on their business. Detachments from the Fifteenth United States Marines chased the bandits back and forth through the jungle, killing a few here and there, but accomplishing very little.

Then the job was turned over to Lyman, who was then a colonel. He put into the field groups of armed natives, men thoroughly familiar with the country and anxious to break up banditry, working under Marine officers and non-commissioned subordinates. The big clean-up began and continued until there was left on the island only one important bandit group and leader, the band commanded by a kind of Santo Domingo Robin Hood, Ramon Nateras. Knowing that the jig was up, Nateras sent word that he was willing to surrender under certain conditions.

Col. Lyman, accompanied only by Capt. Gilchrist, a staff officer, and E. I. Kilbourne, a sugar grower, met Nateras and his men in the heart of the jungle. The meeting was held in a clearing containing several shacks and a store. In the center of the clearing was a flagpole from which the Dominican flag flapped listlessly in the sticky heat. Clustered around the flagpole were Nateras and his bandits, heavily armed, suspicious, fearful.

The robber chief said immediately that he would not surrender if he had to be taken to any community where the Marines were in charge. A bandit named Vicentico had been shot and killed by a marine sentinel while trying to escape, and Nateras feared some such fate might fall to him. Col. Lyman offered to leave Capt. Gilchrist, his staff officer, as a hostage, if Nateras would surrender, but Nateras declined to accept one of the rank of captain as hostage for one so exalted as himself.

Whereupon Col. Lyman, without a moment's hesitation, said to the bandit leader:

"Very well, Nateras. I will be hostage myself. There can be no question about rank if I offer myself as security for your life."

Nateras could not refuse. His men heard Col. Lyman's offer and there was a gleam of admiration in their eyes.

Nateras left the clearing with Capt. Gilchrist, while the Marine officer remained, alone and unarmed, in the midst of the sullen, desperate bandits, every man of them a killer, with no more compunction about taking human life than they would have had about shooting a wild pig or walking up and down the clearing, ringed about by men resentfully fingering rifle or pistol or razor-sharp machete. Lyman waited until word came that Nateras was safe.

And when he was permitted to go the men of Nateras, with no love for any Marine—men whose favorite sport had been shooting Marines—raised a wild yell of tribute to this Marine officer who had shown them the true and perfect color of courage.

Newfoundland In Bad Plight

NEWFOUNDLAND, that great island which stretches across the mouth of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and which is bigger than Ireland, has got herself into such financial difficulties that she is to be taken over by the British Crown, as in the olden days.

The greatest fishing center in the world, Newfoundland was discovered by John Cabot only five years after Columbus landed on San Salvador, and is the oldest colony of Great Britain. A commission has just reported to the House of Commons that financial and political conditions in Newfoundland are desperate and that the islanders are facing utter ruin. For the next few years, or as long as may be necessary, the island will be ruled by a British governor and a commission.

This is the first time in the history of the British Empire that any colony or dominion has been forced to hand its sovereignty back to the mother country. It is especially remarkable because of the marvelous record made by the Dominion of Canada generally during the hard years of the depression. Canada has offered a model to the world for the past four years. Not a depositor in any bank lost a dollar of his money. A stout, sane nation if ever there was one, Canada may some day be the very center of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Roosevelt Facing Sharp Fight in Congress

By James T. Williams, Jr.

WHEN CONGRESS reconvenes the Roosevelt administration will meet its first test of strength in the United States Senate.

There the attack on the Roosevelt recovery program will begin. There the defense of that program must first be made. There the battle will rage from the time the session starts until it ends.

At times this conflict will be along party lines. Frequently, however, Democrats will join Republicans in the attack and Republicans will join Democrats in the defense of the Roosevelt policies and of the way in which the administration is carrying them out.

It will be a session in which the Senate will be put to a test. The courage, sincerity and ability with which individual Senators support or oppose the Roosevelt leadership will be a tremendous factor in shaping the final decision of the upper house and in supplying the deficiencies that the so-called popular branch of Congress will develop before the next session ends.

This prospect of a lively session partly explains the national significance which has been attached to the return to the federal city so far in advance of the convening of Congress of Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, a Roosevelt progressive since the time of the first President Roosevelt, and one of the most independent and influential members of the Senate.

Senator Johnson A Hard Worker

IT HAS LONG been Senator Johnson's custom to return to Washington from California some time before Congress convenes in order to prepare himself for the session. He is one of the hardest-working members of either House. The diligence with which he attends to California matters, regardless of whether they are brought to his attention by Republicans or Democrats, by liberals, conservatives, progressives or radicals—provided they are for the benefit of California—commands the respect of Senators on both sides of the aisle.

But Senator Johnson also belongs to that distinguished minority that always puts the nation's business first.

Long the chairman and now the ranking minority member of the Senate Committee on Commerce, next to the ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Relations, one of the leaders of the Committee on Immigration, active in the affairs of the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation and a tower of strength on the Committee on Naval Affairs, Senator Johnson is necessarily in the confidence of any administration in power regardless of whether he is a close adviser of the President or among his foremost critics.

On Cordial Terms With Roosevelt

UNDER THE administration now in power the relations of President Roosevelt and Senator Johnson have been so cordial, the causes they hold in common so numerous, that it is easy for the President and the California Progressive either to fight shoulder to shoulder or to differ without misunderstanding.

Senator Johnson declined a seat in the Roosevelt cabinet because he believed he could fight more effectively for progressive causes as a member of the Senate. He declined membership on the American delegation to the London Economic Conference for the same reason. He knows best where he can fight best, and in both cases the reasons for his declination were thoroughly understood by the President.

Like Senator Johnson, Senator Norris, of Nebraska, another Roosevelt Progressive, has also returned to Washington to prepare for the session. Other Senators are following their example. It is a good example to follow, because the coming session will be one of the most important the Senate has held since the Great War. It will be distinguished by more than one great debate. The President will require not only the advice and counsel of progressive Senators on both sides of the aisle, but he will welcome criticism that is sincere, fearless and made in the light of facts.
